Robinson Hints Support of Conservative Plan After Patman Veto.

Roosevelt Rejects House Bloc's Plea

By Robert C. Albright.

Bonus hopes—not of the Patman brand—were bolstered at the Capitol yesterday, even as President Roosevelt dashed another dipper of cold water on demands of bonus-inflationists that he sign the $2,200,000,000 Patman measure.

Accepting the veto as inevitable, Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson forecast a safe sustaining vote, then let drop the first authoritative hint of bonus legislation of a milder tenor once the Patman bill is out of the way.

"If it were possible, I would like to see some legislation worked out and passed," said the Senate leader. "I would be willing to contribute to that end."

New Compromise Plan.

Accompanying this development, Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, announced he is revising his bonus compromise plan, giving the President a choice of three methods of bonus payment—through a bond issue, through issuance of currency or from a works fund allotment. As modified yesterday by Clark, the President would be permitted to use all three of the plans if necessary.

While President Roosevelt was turning away empty handed a House "bonus steering committee" seeking his approval of the Patman bill, the House rushed through a joint resolution enabling House and Senate, assembled, to hear President Roosevelt deliver his veto message tomorrow. But the resolution was temporarily blocked in the Senate. Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, objected when Robinson sought unanimous consent for the joint session.

Robinson will ask adoption of the resolution today, offering a privileged motion not subject to unanimous consent. Steiwer will speak briefly against it, and there has been some talk of a filibuster, with Huey Long, of Louisiana, leading the foray.

Opposes Joint Session.

Opposing the joint session, Steiwer took the position that there is no constitutional authority for a joint session to hear a veto message. Under the rules, he told reporters, the President should deliver his message to the House, which could invite Senators to attend, if it wants them.

"I have no objection to the President constituting himself a messenger, and acting as reading clerk for the House," said the Oregonian, "but he should confine his message to the House, which originated the bill."

Senators generally expressed surprise at the list of 12 Senators designated by the American Legion as targets for a veterans' telegraphic barrage in their drive to override the Patman veto. Several on the list, including Senator Clark and Senator Louis Murphy (Democrat), Iowa, were already committed to cast overriding ballots. Appearance of some other names on the list has the effect of strengthening their

Japs Invading Northern China

'Anti-Bandit Expedition,' Tokyo Explains

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, May 21 (Tuesday).—Japanese troops are crossing the Great Wall into northern China on an "anti-bandit expedition," dispatches from Peiping and Hsinking said today.

The war office quickly issued a statement, however, that Japan has no intention of occupying Chinese territory and that the troops will return to Manchukuo as soon as "the bandits have been punished and dispersed."

The dispatches were vague as to whether the Japanese actually entered China, but it was known that units from the Jehol garrison were moving southward with the announced purpose of smashing a concentration of Chinese irregulars at Tsunhwa.

Japanese military officials explained that 1,000 "soldier-bandits," recently raiding southern Jehol, had been driven southward to the Great Wall by the Japanese army and had taken refuge at Tsunhwa, inside the demilitarized zone established by the Tangku truce of 1933.

Japanese authorities alleged that the Chinese permitted the bandit leader, Sun Yung Chin, to remain at Tsunhwa, constituting a menace to the peace of Manchukuo and also violating the Tangku truce, making Japanese military action necessary.

American Messiahs

By The Unofficial Observer

Author of "The New Dealers"

Installment III—Microphone Messiah (Part 1)

The third installment of "The American Messiahs," by the Unofficial Observer, author of the "New Dealers," which appeared last year. While "The American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post, it is commended as a most candid discussion of the mavericks, the reformers and the radio spellbinders now booming their way across the American political stage.

No large body of American citizens—such as the Catholics—bound together in a common spiritual discipline and responsive to the moral teachings of a single spiritual head, could fail to be a political force, and the American Catholics have been such a force for many generations. To be a political force and to be "in politics" are, however, two entirely different things, and it is worth the effort to understand the tremendous change which has come over the church in this country since 1928, when the mere fact that a Catholic layman was candidate for the Presidency led to loose and inaccurate charges that the church had gone into American politics.

The Catholic faith, as a necessary incident to its religious mission, is concerned with creating the sort of social system that is most suited to the mass of humanity. This system has, in the history of the Western World, been the monogamous home and family. As a result of this system of society—itself a revolutionary change from the pagan system it displaced—certain economic and political arrangements proved most convenient: feudalism, the institution of monarchy and the establishment of peasant farming being characteristic. These arrangements worked satisfactorily for more than 1,000 years. Since the industrial revolution, however, they have proved inadequate. Democratic governments have displaced or diluted monarchy, and industrial capitalism has ground down the small-scale peasant farmers.

These changes confronted the Catholic Church with a great crisis, extending over nearly 400 years, producing the Reformation, the Religious Wars, the rise of nationalism and the development of the Marxian class struggle leading to proletarian dictatorship and the materialistic state. The church has, in recent times, made two great efforts to readjust itself to the changes in social and economic conditions. The League Urged To Act at Once In Africa Row

Selassie Pleads to Council, Now in Session; France Shifts Fleet.

The Situation Abroad:

Emperor Haile Selassie in a telegram to the opening of the League of Nations appealed for intervention in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Adolf Hitler conferred with his aids in preparing his message to the Reichstag.

By the United Press.

Geneva, May 20.—Emperor Haile Selassie I of Abyssinia sent an urgent telegraphic appeal to the League of Nations tonight, demanding the council act at its present session to settle the Italian-Abyssinian border dispute and prevent war in East Africa.

The telegram asked the league council to intervene in the dispute and investigate sources of friction unless Italy agreed to allow an arbitration commission to delimit the disputed frontier and judge responsibility for all the frontier clashes.

"Since before last September," the imperial message said, "Italy has concentrated troops, military planes, tanks and war material of all kinds on our frontiers without any provocation or even reply on our part.

Coercion Effort Charged.

"During the Ualual incident, Italy sought by all the means known to diplomacy to evade her international obligations and to prevent an impartial examination of differences which unfortunately have arisen between her and us, and to coerce Ethiopia by threats to pay reparations and make apologies for offences which Ethiopia never committed.

"We resolutely ask the council to

Treasury Puts Ban on Entry Of Silver Coins

Morgenthau Acts to Halt Influx of Foreign Money to U. S.

In a spirit of co-operation with foreign nations trying to protect themselves against, a flight of silver coins, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., with approval of President Roosevelt, last night issued an order prohibiting the entry into this country of foreign silver coins and other forms of silver commonly used as money, except under license.

Silver coins of a monetary value equal at the time of entry to 110 per cent of the market value of their silver content and United States coins may be imported into this country without the necessity of first obtaining a license.

Coincides With London Pledge.

Licenses to import other silver coins will be granted when the Secretary of the Treasury is satisfied that they are necessary to fulfill an obligation to deliver such silver in this country, incurred or assumed prior to today when such coins are shipped by or with the consent of a recognized foreign government, foreign central bank or the Bank for International Settlements and in such other cases as are not "inconsistent with the purposes of the silver purchase act of 1934 or the silver agreement executed at London on July 22, 1933."

The order was described by the Treasury as in line with the London silver agreement under which certain nations pledged themselves not to melt down silver coins for four years.

Morgenthau announced his new regulation after declining to discuss the next step of the Treasury in the silver situation. Bar silver was quoted at New York yesterday at 76 cents an ounce, about 1½ cents below the Treasury price for newly mined silver. The world price of silver, however, has exceeded the Treasury price without bringing any

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

New York, May 20.—A portrait of John Reed, the Harvard cheer leader who became a hero of the Bolshevik revolution, was hung tonight in the halls of his alma mater, nearby those of George Washington and Samuel Adams.

The Harvard Corporation accepted the portrait at a meeting in Cambridge today.

It was hung in Adams House, a dormitory on the site of the boarding house where Reed lived. The portraits of the leaders of the American Revolution are in another room.

The portrait, painted by a classmate, Robert Hallowell, of New York, was presented by a committee of alumni as a memorial to Reed's graduation 25 years ago this June.

In offering to Harvard the portrait of one of its sons—the "storm boy" whom Pancho Villa made a brigadier-general, whom the Communists made a member of the executive committee of the Third International and whose remains now lie near those of Lenin outside the Kremlin walls in Moscow—the committee, on May 9, wrote, in part, to President James B. Conant:

"A committee of Harvard alumni has recently undertaken to have painted a portrait of John Reed, of the class of 1910, whose qualities of courage, idealism and independent mind merit, we believe, some recognition on the part of Harvard men.

"The committee now wishes to make a gift of this painting to Harvard University. Our aim is to honor the memory of an outstanding Harvard man, of whom all Harvard men may well be proud."

The members of the committee are Corliss Lamont '24, secretary-treasurer; Roger Baldwin '05, Heywood Broun '10, Robert Hallowell '10, John Herling '28, Granville Hicks '23, Edward E. Hunt '10, Robert Morse Lovett '92 and Lee Simonson '09.

Head of TVA Challenges McCarl Audit

Comptroller Charged Body With Exceeding Its Authority.

Held Accounts Fixed Equipment Cost at Less Than Price.

A lively dispute between Comptroller General McCarl and Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, head of the Tennessee Valley Authority, was brought into the open yesterday, when Dr. Morgan, before the House Military Affairs Committee, challenged findings in the first official audit of the authority's books by the comptroller general's office.

The findings, in effect, were that TVA had exceeded its authority in numerous ways and had "rigged" the yardstick by which it was to measure retail electric rates. Critics of TVA seized upon the McCarl report to show, for instance, that plant and equipment costing $132,792,294 were transferred to the authority from the War Department, but had been listed on the authority's books at only $51,000,000.

Charges Denied.

Charges that TVA had violated the statutes requiring competitive bidding on Government business were denied by Dr. Morgan, who expressed regret at having to attack the audit in public because "persons hostile to the authority have used the report to imply fraudulent practices."

He was engaged for several hours in replying to the charges in the McCarl report and to questions prompted by it. The portion of the auditing report that received chief attention yesterday reads:

"The nature of exceptions established consists of purchases without competition in violation of section 3709 Revised Statutes; emergency purchases unsupported by showing of emergency; modification of specifications; awards on basis of personal preference; duel compensation; excessive allowances and reimbursement of traveling expenses of prospective employes; allowance of charge for personally owned motor vehicles without prior authorization; overpayment on pay rolls; payment of pay rolls without administrative approval; subscription to newspapers and periodicals in excess of statutory limitations; payment for rented office equipment lost or stolen; payment for power plant, transmission lines and real estate acquired without having clear title thereto; rent for land occupied by CCC camps paid at rates higher than for land purchased outright; lump-sum payments under cost-plus contracts and fees without original invoices and in excess of reported progress of work; claims paid for loss and damage to property; apparent overpayments on electrical equipment under annual agreements; cost of reconditioning plant agreed by contract to be for account of payment of losses; rent for buildings without evidence showing that payments are not in excess of 15 per cent of fair market value; pre-audited certified vouchers increased and payments made to vendors in excess of amounts shown in invoices; allowances in expense accounts for bridge tool ticket books before such books have been used; loans to co-operative associations without security; hire of special conveyances such as buses and airplanes for visitors and students, and noncompliance with contractual provisions for insurance protection covering personal injury."

Inferences Assailed.

Inferences drawn from the report and circulated by TVA critics are "in direct contradiction" to engineering necessities and good business practice, Dr. Morgan said. He said the report was unfair because it listed without comment expenditures which on their face might be called "doubtful," but which were thoroughly justified by sound engineering

"It apparently boils down," he said at one point, "to question of whose judgment shall decide on the job—the engineers or the auditors. * * ½ So far we have taken the judgment of the negineers and for this we are being subjected to a barrage of criticism."

Reserve Unit Assails Plans Of Bank Bill

Adverse Report by All Twelve Made Public at Senate Hearing.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Another severe bombardment was laid down on Title II of the Eccles banking bill yesterday when five members of the Federal Reserve Board's own advisory council assailed its major provisions before the Glass banking and currency sub-committee.

Walter W. Smith, president of the council and president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, presented to the sub-committee and made public a copy of the council's report on the bill, made to the Reserve board April 10.

In the report the 12 members of the council, one from each Reserve district, unanimously recommended that action be deferred on the Eccles proposals pending an opportunity for more detailed study and consideration. If Congress, however, wishes to proceed with legislation at this time, the council held, Title II, which affects the Reserve system, should be drastically modified.

Five Emphatic.

The five members of the council appearing before the committee yesterday expressed their support in general of the suggestions contained in the organization's report. Their testimony differed only in the emphasis they placed on the importance of various provisions and aspects of the measure. Among those who testified was James H. Perkins, chairman of the board of the National City Bank of New York, the second largest bank in the country.

Opposition of the proposals of Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Reserve Board among banking and business groups has become not only formidable, but also impressive. So far not a single business or financial group has sent a spokesman before the Glass sub-committee to speak a kind word for the Eccles program.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the committee holding the hearings, said it was as ready to give proponents of the bill time in which to be heard as it is to give opponents. But he has not received many requests for time from friends of the bill.

Ready for Proponents.

At the suggestion of Senators James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, and Robert Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, the Virginian has invited Father Charles E. Coughlin to give the sub-committee his views. So far, Senator Glass has not heard from the priest, but reports from Detroit are that Father Coughlin will accept the invitation.

Father Coughlin is a stanch advocate of Government control of the banking system of the Nation. He favors Government ownership of the Reserve banks, an idea indorsed by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau last week. Morgenthau declined yesterday to elaborate on his testimony before the committee. He indorsed the pending bill "in principle," while Gov. Eccles has valiantly defended his proposals.

On the other hand, the bill has been subjected to a steady fire of opposition. It has been hit by the United States Chamber of Commerce—only Sunday, Harper Sibley, new president of that organization, took another crack at the measure in a letter to his membership—by the American Bankers Association, by the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council and now by the Reserve board's own advisory council.

The Reserve Advisory Council, composed of one member from each Reserve district, selected by the directors of the Reserve bank of that district, is required by the Federal Reserve act to meet four times a year in Washington to consult and advise with the Reserve board and to make representations to the board regarding matters under its jurisdiction.

Steady Criticism.

Although the membership of this council has recently undergone changes, it has been critical of Treasury and Reserve politics ever since the New Deal got under way. Eccles, it is understood, made an unusual effort to convert the council to his proposals for revamping the Reserve system, but in vain.

The council suggested several technical changes in Title I of the bill, which applies to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and in Title III, which makes miscellaneous and administrative amendments to the national banking act. With the changes proposed, the council urged enactment of these two parts of the bill.

But it severely condemned Title II, stating at the outset that "the council questions whether there is any emergency at the present time which makes it necessary to enact into law the provisions of Title II without further careful consideration and study."

The council pointed out that "in recent years so many changes have been made in the whole fiscal and financial structure of the country that there may well be some real concern entertained as to whether a proper relationship between the Four Areas Over Nation Set Up, With Different Bases for Pay.

Rates Far Below Those Prevailing

County Population Also Factor for Variation; Exceptions Listed.

Text of order fixing relief. Wages and Hours— Page 7

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt yesterday fixed wages for workers to be taken off relief rolls and employed in the works relief program at figures considerably below prevailing scales.

The President divided the country into four areas, with a different wage scale in each. Wages also were scaled according to population of counties in which work is done, residents of the smallest counties receiving the smallest wages.

The wages run from $19 a month for unskilled workers in the smallest counties in the lowest wage areas to $94 a month for professional and technical workers in the largest counties in the highest wage areas.

At once a fight was opened on the scale. Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, author of the prevailing wage clause rejected by the Senate, declared the pay rates would completely wreck the country's wage scale, and said he would attack the order on the Senate floor.

Workers were divided into four classifications, according to skill. The divisions were unskilled, intermediate, skilled, and professional and technical.

The highest pay under the schedule would be $55 for unskilled workers, $65 for intermediate, $85 for skilled workers and $94 for professional and technical workers. The lowest would be $19 for unskilled workers, $27 for intermediate, $35 for skilled and $39 for professional workers.

The scale for Washington would be $45 a month for unskilled workers, $58 for intermediate, $72 for skilled workers and $79 for professional and technical workers.

This scale compares with 55 cents an hour, or $22 a week for union laborers; $55 a week for union carpenters, $66 a week for union iron workers and $70 a week for union bricklayers in Washington. These scales, however, are based on actual work of 40 hours a week. The union workers are not paid if they are forced to lay off because of weather conditions or other contingencies.

The new scales apply to workers on projects financed in whole or in part from the works relief fund, but a number of exceptions are made, including workers on projects under supervision of the PWA, on highway and grade crossing elimination, on Government buildings, and on such projects as may be exempted by Harry L. Hopkins, director of the progress division.

Zones by States.

Second—Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland and West Virginia.

Third—Arkansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Virginia.

Lowest wages—Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Besides dividing the country into four districts for wage-making purposes, the President fixed wages in five population groups, depending on the population of the county in which the work is done.

The population groups are for

Cutting Friends Snub Chavez, Leave as He Takes Senate Oath

Snubbed by the Senate Progressive bloc in a pointed demonstration of protest, Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, dark-featured former Representative, took his seat in the Senate yesterday in an atmosphere of frigid tension.

By appointment of Gov. Clyde Tingley of New Mexico, Chavez took the oath to succeed the late Senator Bronson Cutting, who defeated him in the last election and against whom Chavez filed an election protest.

Five of Cutting's associates in the Progressive bloc arose in a body and left the chamber as the Senator-designate came forward to take the oath. A sixth, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, preceded them out of the Senate.

Others who withdrew were Senators Norris, Nebraska; Johnson, California; Nye, North Dakota (Republicans); La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota. Two of these made statements explaining their action.

To Run Next Year.

Senate attaches said they could not recall a parallel rebuff.

Attorneys for Chavez withdrew election contest charges against Cutting shortly after the Senator was killed in the Missouri crash of a fog-bound passenger plane. Chairman Walter F. George of the Privileges and Elections Committee, predicted the committee will soon take action dismissing the case. This means that Chavez, whose appointment holds good only until the next election, will have to run again next year.

Senator Borah walked out of the chamber immediately after the noon assembly. Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, then announced that Chavez was present and ready to take the oath. Vice President Garner invited him to come forward, and he advanced on the arm of Senator Hatch.

A scattering of Senators who remained in the Senate stared straight ahead with strained faces as the oath was read. Afterward, Chavez returned with Hatch to a seat in the rear of the Democratic

Fight in House Begun to Give NRA 2 Years

By Leon Dure, Jr.

A headlong collision between House and Senate over extension of the NRA appeared inevitable yesterday as Administration forces introduced in the lower chamber a resolution continuing the recovery agency two years after June 16.

This measure was presented as a substitute for the Clark resolution, already adopted by the Senate, which extends the Blue Eagle only 9½ months and under conditions that NRA officials declare would bring its early death.

"It is as grave a crisis as we have had," he warned in a radio talk last night, "for, if NRA goes down, a large part of the New Deal goes down with it."

Further spice was added to the controversy when Senate Progressives clashed bitterly wtih leaders of the NRA convention to be held here tomorrow. Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, charged that

'Mona Lisa' Model Identified By Ohioan After 400 Years

By the Associated Press.

Yellow Springs, Ohio, May 20.—For 400 years the woman with the enigmatic smile who posed for the famous painting, "Mona Lisa," has been falsely identified, Prof. Raymond S. Stites asserted today.

Dr. Stites, professor of aesthetics at Antioch College, said he has proof from 12 years of research in the life of Leonardo da Vinci that the woman was Isabella d'Este, the Marchioness of Mantua.

Reference books are incorrect, Dr. Stites said, in identifying the model for Leonardo's masterpiece as Madonna Lisa, Neapolitan wife of Zanoki, or Francesco Del Giocondo.

Geogio Vasari, an Italian writer, made the original error 40 years after the death of Leonardo in 1519, the professor explained. He made the error in copying a manuscript by Gaddiano, a Florentine, "and everyone since then has carried the error along," Dr. Stites said.

Estimating the value of the painting, which now hangs in the Louvre, as "about $1,000,000," the professor said, "until now the painting has been one of more or less a mythical person. Now one begins to understand why the Mona Lisa has always been so popular. It is the portrait of one of the noblest and most perfect women of the Renaissance."

The professor's identification of the model for Leonardo was obtained easily, he said.

Examining Leonardo's writings, Dr. Stites found no mention of Madonna Lisa, but only the statement that Leonardo painted a portrait of her husband. From Leonardo's writings, he established that the famous artist made the profile drawings of Isabella, Marchioness of Mantua, who was the wife of Marquis Gonzaga, whose "victory" at Fornovo over the forces of Charles VIII is considered the first modern battle between nations.

Supreme Court Fails to Settle Legality of NRA

Decision on Farm Financing Law Also Delayed; Meets Again May 27.

By the Associated Press.

A 6-to-3 vote refusal to interfere with a Negro Communist jail sentence yesterday capped a crowded session of the Supreme Court which left unanswered for at least another week the constitutional objections raised against NRA and the farm moratorium law.

Ten cases were disposed of in the short meeting and a host of orders issued, leaving the court with a well-pruned docket for the two remaining decision days—May 27 and June 3. Before the summer recess it was scheduled to rule on NRA fundamentals presented in the New York Schechter poultry case and to say whether or not the 5-year mortgage moratorium granted farmers in the Frazier-Lemke law is constitutional.

Technicalities Cited.

Legal technicalities were cited by the court majority in disclaiming jurisdiction over the conviction of Angelo Herndon, Atlanta, Ga., Negro, and the 18-to-20-year sentence imposed for distributing revolutionary literature under a Georgia statute against inciting insurrection enacted in 1866—just after the Civil War.

It held the question of constitutional protection for Herndon was raised too late in the judicial process to be availing. But a court minority, contending Herndon's case should be heard, asserted other doctrine must be followed "if the great securities of the Constitution are not to be lost in a web of procedural entanglements."

Other Decisions.

The day's decisions included:

A disclaimer of jurisdiction over the Federal Government's claim to exclusive control over water power developments on the New and Kanawha Rivers in West Virginia. It had been disputed by that State and by several private power companies.

Invalidation of Ohio's tax upon real estate trust certificates.

In addition, the court opened the way for a possible ruling on the validity of the Bankhead cotton control act by consenting to review a suit brought by Lee Moor, a Texas producer, which was dismissed in lower courts. He sued the Texas and New Orleans Railroad for not accepting cotton without tags specifying that the act had been compiled with in its production.

Between You and Me

Farley the Target in Chavez Rebuff; La Follettes for Roosevelt; Poets in Federal Reserve.

By Raymond Clapper

TO appreciate the full force of the rebuke which Progressive Senators administered to Dennis Chavez by walking out of the chamber when he was being sworn in as Senator from New Mexico, it is necessary to keep in mind that the Senate prides itself on its club-like atmosphere.

They play politics and hit hard but for the most part it is as impersonal as the courtroom wrangling of opposing lawyers. Off duty, Republicans and Democrats play golf together. They rove back and forth across the center aisle exchanging stories and gossip. New members, like college fraternity freshmen, are gradually familiarized with the traditions of the Senate. They quickly learn what is cricket and what is not.

Once the Senate was called a "rich man's club," but the direct primary has leveled off the high-income bracket members, so that extremely wealthy Senators are the exception rather than the rule. Notwithstanding that change, the atmosphere of fraternity has been retained to a large extent. Huey Long's coming was resented by many Senators because they feared he would disregard the Senate's most sacred traditions. He has. Still he has made many personal friends and is an unending source of amusement around the chamber. Only recently Huey rebuked one of the older Senators for interrupting him without permission, in transgression of the most cherished rule of the Senate.

Particularly do the Senators pride themselves upon extending the hand of fellowship to new members. Regardless of political differences, each Senator is looked upon somewhat as an ambassador of a sovereign State and carries with his person something of the aura of an envoy.

Therefore when Chavez took the seat vacated by the death of Senator Bronson Cutting and five Senate liberals walked out, the effect was as startling as the action was unprecedented. The gesture was all the more stinging because it came from six men who in their personal contacts within the Senate are regarded as among the kindliest members—Johnson of California, Norris of Nebraska, Nye of North Dakota, La Follette of Wisconsin, Shipstead of Minnesota, and Borah, who left a little ahead of them. Hard fighters, all are eminently regarded by their fellow Senators, of all political and economic complexions, as fair fighters. They are not moved by personalities but are unsparing in an issue. They let the chips fall where they may.

The chips fell heavily in this instance upon Chavez, but the reason was that they sought to avenge the effort to contest the re-election last fall of Cutting. While they bitterly resented the fact that Chavez brought the contest charging corruption and padding the vote count, they resented even more the fact that the Roosevelt Admininistration backed Chavez against Cutting who had bolted the Republican Party in 1932 to support Roosevelt. For this they largely blame Chairman Farley.

Chavez might have averted this rebuke had he refused to accept appointment as Cutting's successor and insisted upon winning the seat by a special election. The protesting Senators were determined to strike at Farley. Chavez clumsily remained in the line of fire.

Political Parade: Leftwingers are throwing their rocks more at Farley than at Mr. Roosevelt . . . White House wooing of the lefties is bringing results. Or is it the works program? Gov. La Follette, who drew $100,000,000 out of the works chest last week, declares against a national third party, plainly indicating the La Follettes are prepared to support Mr. Roosevelt next year. Upton Sinclair is cooing conditionally, in effect offering his California Democratic organization to the Administration if Mr. Roosevelt will indorse Epic's production-for-use plan. Mayor LaGuardia, addressing La Follette followers, heaves a brick at Huey Long's share-our-wealth program and talks about platforms rather than personalities. He's tied in close with the Administration on relief now and is not disposed to bite the hand that offers work to New York's relief rolls . . . Gov. Talmadge of Roosevelt's "other State" is carrying on the fight almost alone. He is so far out on the limb that he can't get back . . . Administration friends here are expected to push Robert H. Jackson to succeed Lehman as Governor of New York. Roosevelt likes him. Morgenthau brought him into the Treasury as internal revenue chief counsel and is egging him on in the Mellon tax case . . . Farley apparently will have to put aside 1936 gubernatorial amibitions to manage the Roosevelt campaign and take a chance at Albany later.

NRA has driven former Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran, not to drink necessarily, but to night school. He is a freshman law student at the Washington College of Law.

Dr. Doran, a chemist, joined the Treasury as Internal Revenue chemist 28 years ago. His job then was testing liquor. By the time prohibition came along he knew more about liquor and the ways of beating the revenuers than anyone else and finally, after the political jobholders did their worst with prohibition enforcement, Doran was placed in charge. He was the best of the lot, but it was a task beyond human powers. His wife tried to help by conducting a popular campaign for liquorless cocktails which did not prove popular except among those who didn't drink anyway.

Democrats came in and began surrounding Doran with politicians. They got in the way so conspicuously that they had to be dropped. Then repeal and NRA came along and mercifully saved Dr. Doran from further punishment. He swung over as administrator of the Distilled Spirits Institute and supervisor of the distillers' code authority. He is the only man who did not ruin a good reputation in trying to make prohibition work. In Washington the general conclusion was that if Doc Doran couldn't make it click, the whole scheme might as well be given up. And it was.

After fighting against nepotism in Congress for four years, Representative J. Ridley Mitchell, Tennessee Democrat, finally won an opportunity to be heard before a House Committee on the subject of wives, children, parents and in-laws working or drawing pay as clerks of Senators and Representatives. He has been up against a conspiracy of silence.

When the subject has been forced on the floor, as it was last week when Mitchell sought to attach his anti-nepotism amendment to the legislative appropriation bill, it has been howled down without a record vote. Exposure has driven some relatives off of the Congressional pay roll, but more than 50 Representatives still believe that to the victor's kinfolk belong the spolis.

They're not only humanizing the Federal Reserve Board, since a couple of good newspapermen went to work on it, but one of the members has taken up poetry. Reserve Board Member Szymozak, of Chicago, went back to his home State to address the Illinois Bankers Association and wound up with a grand opera finale in verse beginning:

"Say not, the struggle nought availeth,
"The labor and the wounds are vain."

Advisory Board Urges Division Of Social Bill

Senate Committee Calls Measure 'Beginning' of Overdue Need.

By the Associated Press.

A report from the Business Advisory Council of the Commerce Department on the Administration's social security program arrived at the Capitol yesterday simultaneously with a report from the Senate Finance Committee that something of the kind was needed "if our social order is to endure."

The Finance Committee, in reporting the gigantic bill to the Senate, contended that it was "a minimum of what the American people have a right to expect from this Congress in the way of providing a greater measure of security." The report was submitted by Chairman Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi.

The advisory council report, sent to Congress by President Roosevelt, proposed that the bill be split up into separate measures for old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, and further study of old-age pensions before legislating a program.

Some controversy arose recently over charges that the Administration was withholding advisory council reports critical of its policies and making public only those favorable to the New Deal program.

The resolution asking the President to supply the Senate with copies of the council's reports was introduced after these charges had been aired.

President Roosevelt's message to the Senate transmitting the reports follows:

"In response to Senate resolution 132, I inclose copies of the report filed with me by the Business Advisory Council on Thursday, May 2, 1935. These reports pertain to the National Industrial Recovery Administration, the social security bill, and grants to State for old-age assistance. No other reports were left with me at that time and no other reports are now on file with me.

"The method of handling reports of the Business Advisory Council is for Chairman Kendall to present them to the administration officials having to do with the subject matter rather than leaving them in my possession."

With the committee's report, the security bill went to the Senate calendar to await the breaking of the legislative jam. Harrison was hopeful that once the bill got up for consideration, the debate would not last long.

Concluding his report on the bill, the Mississippian said:

"The social security act will not usher in the millennium. Like all major new legislation, it will doubtless, in the course of time, have to be supplemented and changed in many material respects. But, it represents a beginning which has long been overdue and whose efforts, as far as they can be foreseen, will be distinctly beneficial."

Senate Votes Increase In White House Police

The Senate passed yesterday and sent to the President a bill which authorizes an increase of 12 privates in the White House police force, bringing the total to 55. The bill passed the House several weeks ago.

Expansion of the White House police will enable the Metropolitan Police Department to regain seven policemen lent the White House organization. The increase was necessitated by enlargement of the Executive offices of the President.

Schawb Looks For Big Surge To Prosperity

Steel Magnate Tells of Outlook at Mellon Tax Hearing.

However long the depression lasts, the rebound to prosperity will be "proportionately higher."

Smiling with the optimism that has characterized his long career in industry, Charles M. Schwab, gray-haired, ruddy-faced steel magnate, yesterday made this statement to the Tax Appeals Board at Andrew W. Mellon's income tax hearing.

Schwab appeared as a witness in the Government's case against Mr. Mellon.

"The Nation ultimately will come out of this depression," said Schwab, "and go to greater heights than in the past.

"Nobody in the industry ever anticipated we would face such a depression as we've gone through in the last five or six years."

Schwab Talks Shop.

Schwab told the board of conditions in the steel industry and of its growth from the days when he first entered it.

He sat with arms folded in the witness chair as he answered the questions of Frank J. Hogan, Mellon's attorney.

Called for testimony in connection with the attempt of Mellon's lawyers to prove that the McClintic-Marshall Steel Co. was worth $15,000,000 in 1913, Schwab said he would have "given a very handsome price" for the big structural firm that year.

"How much?" asked Hogan.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Schwab, "but a good price. There never was a time I wouldn't have been glad to acquire that company."

Stating McClintic-Marshall was given "unparalleled management," Schwab said he did not take part directly in the negotiations which resulted in Bethlehem Steel's acquisition of McClintic-Marshall in 1930, when the value of the company was about $65,000,000.

Mellon owned a large block of shares in McClintic-Marshall until that company was taken over by Bethlehem. He insists that the shares were worth $500 each in 1913, whereas the Internal Revenue Bureau claims they were worth only $158 each in that year.

The point at issue is the average value of the stock between 1913, the year the income tax law went into effect, and 1930. The Government contends that Mellon's income tax return for 1931 was not adequate.

Witness Dodges Details.

Genial throughout cross-examination, Schwab refused to be drawn into a discussion of details.

"I'm trying to make it clear," he said, "that in these great transactions of the past it was the vision of the future, and not the past, that dominated."

Responding to one question about steel earnings in 1913, Schwab replied to Fred Shearer, Government counsel:

"Now, you're an eminent lawyer. If I were to ask you what Blackstone said on page 19, could you tell me?"

The smiling witness completed his testimony, then delayed the hearing for several minutes while he shook hands with three members of the Tax Appeals Board.

"It's been a pleasure to meet your honors," beamed Schwab.

He then picked up his cane and hat and departed.

Late in the afternoon J. Leonard Replogle, board chairman of the Warren Pipe & Foundry Co. and steel administrator for the Government during the World War, took the stand.

The Latch String Is Out For Runaway Girl, 14

The latch string is out for Lillian Livingston, 14-year-old Powell Junior High pupil, who ran away from home May 14. Her mother, Mrs. Louise Livingston, of 3251 Mount Pleasant street, yesterday sent a plea to her daughter, asking her to come home and saying that "all is forgiven."

Lillian, who ran away after she had been called down for keeping late hours, has not been heard from, her mother said. Police reported that she had been seen by a taxi driver riding on a large truck which had South Carolina license tags.

The missing girl was dressed in a green skirt, blue blouse, tan jacket which had the letters "Lil" on the back, black shoes and white socks when she left home. She is 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 105 pounds.

Man Freed in 5 Poison Deaths Hopes Remaining Child Lives

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 20.—Frederick Gross, whose wife and four children have died mysteriously, walked out of homicide court today a free man. He had been held ten days on a charge of causing their deaths by administering a little-known poison.

"God grant that he gets well," said the mild-mannered bookkeeper of Frank, 5, the only one of his five children still alive. "He is all I have left."

After the court discharged him, he murmured "Thank you very much."

Gross throughout his imprisonment protested he was innocent. He sat quietly in court, a neat figure in a new gray suit, and heard District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan request dismissal.

Geoghan said Gross' conduct had created a strong impression of innocence, and that there was insufficient evidence to present to the grand jury.

Gross touched upon the possibility that his wife might have poisoned herself and the children.

"I can't think my wife deliberately intended to kill herself and our children," he said. "We were so close and loving to each other."

"I'll never have a moment's peace until I find out how it all happened. I hope I haven't lost my position—I need the job for myself and my boy and to pay back the money this trouble has cost me."

The children who died were Frederick, 9; Leo, 3; Katherine, 7, and Barbara, 18 months.

Geoghan told the court the dismissal of Gross would not end his investigation. He described Gross as "Either the most cold-blooded murderer or the most innocent man in the world," and said he had answered all questions "openly and frankly."

Filibuster Aims At 24 Warships In Navy Budget

Munitions Probers, Led by Nye, Open Fight for Amendments.

By the Associated Press.

Primed with data on alleged "fat profits" likely to go to shipbuilders, munitions investigators opened a filibuster in the Senate yesterday to compel amendment of the $460,000,000 naval appropriation bill to knock out the provision for 24 new warships.

A motion to recommit the bill to put in the amendments was snowed under, 64 to 14. Chairman Nye (Republican), North Dakota, of the Munitions Committee, then proceeded to back up his threat of a filibuster by continuing an attack on the bill that he had started in the middle of the afternoon.

One of Nye's proposed amendments apparently was aimed directly at fleet maneuvers in the Pacific and its resultant Japanese reaction. He would require "State Department approval of the scene of naval maneuvers."

Block Excess Profits.

The North Dakotan began his filibuster by branding the war preparedness program a "racket," supported by shipbuilders and munitions makers, and then proposed a five-point series of amendments to the bill by which he said the Government could block excess profits to shipbuilders.

"Shipbuilders have been plundering the United States," the North Dakotan said, as he launched into his attack. He criticized the activities of this country in the business of preparing for war and, stepping into the overseas field, declared that the "crowned heads" negotiating for peace after the World War should have "crowned Sir Basil Zaharoff," whom he named as munitions salesman "largely responsible for the World War."

The Navy bill as it came to the Senate carried $132,000,000 for building ships and for armament of the new vessels. Included in this sum was $29,000,000—including $6,000,000 for armament—for starting 24 vessels in addition to those which had been financed during 1933 and 1934 by $278,000,000 of public works funds.

All Leave but Four.

The Senators left Nye largely to himself late in the day. Only four members were on the floor as the filibuster went on.

Alluding to the incident regarding the evidence that the Army was planning a series of air bases near the Canadian border, Nye declared with reference to the President:

"Instead of chastising the Army officers the commander in chief of the Army and Navy chastised the chairman of the House Committee for letting the information get out."

Four Speeders Get Jail Terms; Others Fined

First Offenders Assessed $25 in Police Court After Week-end Drive.

It was "blue Monday" for traffic law violators in Police Court yesterday, with Judge Isaac R. Hitt imposing heavy penalties against week-end offenders.

Four accused speeders went to jail for failure to pay fines and two others were penalized $25 each on first-offense speeding charges.

Those committed to jail and their sentences were Edward H. Roberts, 5400 block of Belt road northwest, $20 or 20 days; Leon Warren, 1800 block of Fourth street northwest, $15 or 15 days; Roy S. Booth, 700 block of Fourteenth street northwest, $25 or 25 days, and Roger Alston, 5100 block of Myrtle street northeast, $20 or 20 days.

The two first-offense speeders who paid fines of $25 each gave names of William P. Stedman, 200 block of Fourteenth street northeast, and Leonard A. Kracke, of Ballston, Va.

George P. Dryer, 4900 block of Sargent road southeast, paid a $15 fine for first-offense speeding, and Crisson J. Davis, of the Cairo Hotel, paid $20 for an alleged second offense. Fred Minnis and Jack Gaskins paid $25 each on charges of driving without a permit.

Response Fails to Meet Old Clothes Drive Need

Although Washington has responded generously to Bundle Week—the drive for old clothes for the needy—the need still exceeds the supply, the Junior Board of Commerce reported yesterday. Any sort of faded, outgrown, or partially worn clothing can be used.

Bundles of clothing can be left at any Standard Oil station, or a Premier cab will call and get the package without charge. The Dry Cleaners and Laundry Owners Association has volunteered to recondition the clothing donated.

Writing Expert Called Before Lyddane Probe

Grand Jury Opens Hearing on Alleged Death 'Plot' at Rockville.

Burt C. Farrar, a Treasury Department expert on writing, testified in Rockville yesterday as the grand jury took up the wierd Lyddane conspiracy case.

Farrar was called in connection with a typewriter and two mysterious notes which State's Attorney James H. Pugh presented as evidence to the grand jury.

Pugh claims that the typewriter was used by Mrs. Anne Lyddane while she worked in the Farmers Banking & Trust Co., and he further claims that on this machine were written notes received by two of Mrs. Lyddane's co-conspirators.

The State is asking the grand jury to indict Mrs. Lyddane on a charge of conspiring with three men to murder her husband, Francis "Slom" Lyddane, and Mrs. Arthur Beall, who once named her a corespondent in a divorce suit.

The grand jury is not expected to announce its decision until tomorrow. In the meantime 20 witnesses will parade before it—policemen, gangsters and friends of the Bealls.

Mrs. Lyddane is at present charged with conspiring with John Martin Boland, a Washington police character, to murder her husband. She had been charged with conspiring with two former convicts, John "Googy" Carnell and Edwin H. Davis, to murder Mrs. Beall, but at preliminary hearing this charge was dropped.

Prosecutor Pugh, however, has announced that he will ask the grand jury to indict Mrs. Lyddane on both conspiracy counts.

Chavez Is Snubbed By Cutting Friends

Aided by Farley.

Cutting won out over Chavez last year by a narrow margin, after a campaign in which Postmaster General Farley actively interested himself in the former representative's race. Farley's participation was deeply resented by Progressives, who pointed out that Cutting had left his own party's candidate in 1932 to campaign for Roosevelt.

An estrangement between Cutting and Roosevelt later developed, after Cutting opposed Administration slashes in veterans' benefits.

Questioned after yesterday's demonstration, Senator Norris said:

"I left the chamber because that was the only way in my helplessness, that I could show my condemnation of the disgraceful and unwarranted fight made last year to drive Senator Cutting out of public life. The determined effort of the Democratic National Committee and its chairman (Postmaster General Farley) to defeat Senator Cutting for reelection, constituted one of the greatest pieces of political ingratitude in history. It is a blot on the history of the Roosevelt Administration which nothing can erase."

Senator Johnson made the following comment:

"Our affection for Bronson Cutting was such, and our resentment against the contest filed against him—a contest utterly unwarranted and without merit—was so profound, that we simply could not bear to see his successor seated, his successor being who he is."

New Apartment House Planned on Kennedy St.

Madison Terrace Corporation applied at the office of the District Building Inspector yesterday for a permit to construct a five-story, basement and sub-basement apartments and store building at 1365 Kennedy street northwest. The estimated cost of the project is placed at $140,000.

The structure, to be built of reinforced concrete and brick, will contain 85 rooms, providing accommodations for 43 families. Located on lots 13, 14, 15 and 16, in square 2801, the building will have a frontage of 137½ feet on Kennedy street and one of 101½ feet on Colorado avenue. Plans filed with the application show five stores facing the Colorado avenue frontage. H. L. Breuninger is listed as the architect.

Day's Contempt Fine Is Waived by Justice

Justice Jennings Bailey, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday waived a $25 fine he had imposed on Policeman James P. Day for contempt of court. Day was arrested by deputy marshals when he failed to show up in a civil case in which he was a witness.

The District Commissioners have not yet acted on the recommendation of Assistant Superintendent L. I. H. Edwards that Day be dismissed from the force. The officer has been arraigned three times on intoxication charges, and has been fined twice. His third trial brought a recommendation that he be dismissed on the fourth offense.

When the marshals took Day from his Eighth street southeast home, they brought him to the courthouse, where he was examined by a police surgeon who said he was intoxicated.

Bonus Supporters Deliver Final Plea to President resolution to vote to sustain the President. In this class was Senator Dietrich (Democrat), Illinois.

Advised that Wyoming legionnaires are being requested to wire him to cast an overriding ballot, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, telegraphed the legion commander of his State to ask them "to let me know whether or not they are willing to participate in cheapening the American dollar in order that they may have immediate payment of the bonus."

"'Cheap money,'" said O'Mahoney, "means expensive bread; it means an increase in the cost of living; it will reduce the purchasing power of every dollar that goes to those on relief. When money is cheapened the cost of all commodities immediately rises."

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, author of the so-called "greenback" bonus bill that has passed both houses of Congress, led a score of his bonus followers to the White House in a futile effort to persuade the President not to veto the bill.

They knew before they started the President would veto the bill. He has so indicated on a half a dozen occasions, and only last week announced he would not only veto the bill but personally deliver the message.

Nevertheless, the delegation spent half an hour with the President stating their case. They stated the bonus is a legal obligation of the Government, contending it can be paid now in non-interest bearing Treasury notes without burdening the Treasury and without damage to the monetary system.

President Roosevelt didn't agree with them, but he reserved most of his fire for tomorrow's message.

"He listened and was very pleasant," Representative Patman told reporters. Another member of the delegation, however, said the President let the committee know quite plainly he would not sign their bill.

In so many words, Patman insisted his measure is not an inflation bill at all. A lengthy memorandum was prepared for the President, summing up the Patman arguments.

"The most enthusiastic advocate of the old gold standard and the most reactionary banker can not question the soundness of this money, which will have 60 per cent more gold behind it than any Federal Reserve note or other bankers' money ever had," read their statement, in part.

"Our circulating medium may not necessarily be increased by one dollar. Such payment, however, will result in great benefit to the people."

Statement by Robinson that he is willing to assist in working out other bonus legislation, once the Patman veto is sustained, served to quash reports that the bonds issue may "die" for this session, with the Patman bill.

Speculation turned on whether this will lead to a revival of the Vinson bill, providing an outright $2,200,000,000 Treasury appropriation for cash payment, or even the Harrison "compromise" for partial immediate payment in bonds or cash. The President reputedly would sign the latter measure, but has threatened another veto if the Vinson bill is passed. Sponsors of the Vinson plan, however, insist it is 6 to 8 votes stronger in the Senate than the Patman bill—enough to override a veto.

Senator Clark is first in the field with a compromise embodying the salient features of the foregoing plans. He will offer it as a rider on the Navy appropriation bill, provided that measure is not immediately enacted into law.

A filibuster is now in progress against the Navy measure, led by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, who wants modifying munitions amendments attached. A number of other Senators, including Clark, will come to Nye's assistance today. It is the Missourian's contention that the bill will be held up long enough to make the bonus rider in order. To forestall a point of order against it, Clark plans to ask a two-thirds vote of the Senate to suspend the rules.

Text of the Resolution Providing For Two-Year Extension of NRA

To extend until June 16, 1937, and to amend the provisions of Title I of the National Industrial Recovery Act, and for other purposes.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that section 2(c) of Title I of the National Industrial Recovery Act is amended by striking out "at the expiration of two years after the date of enactment of this act" and inserting in lieu thereof "on June 16, 1937."

Section 2. The provisions of said Title I are hereby amended by the addition of the following sections, which shall be construed as amendatory of other provisions of said title, so far as inconsistent therewith:

"Section 1(a). The President is hereby authorized and directed to approve or prescribe codes of fair competition, as herein provided, whenever he shall find that such action is necessary and proper to effectuate the policy herein declared and is in conformity with the standards herein set forth. No code of fair competition shall be established for any trade, industry or subdivision thereof which is not subject to the Federal power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce: Provided, however, that small or local enterprises which, because of a limited volume of production or area of distribution, or otherwise, do not substantially affect such commerce shall be exempted from the application of any code.

"Section 1(b).—No price fixing by concerted action, either with or without governmental supervision, shall be permitted or sanctioned under the provisions of any code, provided that provisions which the President shall find necessary and in the public interest, and which are established and enforced under governmental control, in order to prohibit discriminatory price cutting, or otherwise to protect small enterprises against discrimination or oppression, or to deter the growth of monopolies, or to prevent the waste of mineral resources, shall be permissible, but no person shall thereby be prevented from selling goods or services, without discrimination between customers, at a fair competitive price.

Pay and Hour Provisions.

"Section 1(c).—Every approved or prescribed code of fair competition shall contain provisions establishing minimum rates of pay, maximum hours of labor, the requirements of section 7(a) of this title, a prohibition of child labor and requirements for the making of reports and the keeping of such books and records as may be necessary to establish compliance with its provisions and for the examination of pertinent books and records to verify the accuracy of such reports.

The maximum hours and minimum rates of pay required in any code of fair competition shall be those which the President finds to be fair and reasonable and calculated to promote or to maintain fair competition within or between trades or industries, or subdivisions thereof, after giving due consideration to living and working conditions in and surrounding the trade or industry or subdivision thereof, which is directly involved, or to regional or other differences in such conditions. In the fixing of maximum hours, provision may be made, when found necessary, for overtime work (beyond the established maximum hours) to be paid for at such a rate or rates as may be provided in such code. Minimum rates of pay shall not be so graded, or classified as to tend to set maximum rates of pay, but otherwise may be differentiated between trades and industries according to the experience or skill of employes involved, and differentiated according to locality of employment or other variances in living and working conditions.

"Section 1(d)—Any code approved by the President under the provisions of section 3(a) of this title may, in addition to the foregoing requirements of section 1(c) contains definitions of and prohibitions of two classes of unfair methods of competition: Class A — dishonest or fraudulent trade practices, or unfair methods of competition which have been so defined in the courts of the United States or established by orders of the Federal Trade Commission made subject to judicial review; Class B—all other methods of competition which are defined as unfair by those herein authorized to apply for the approval of a code and which are approved by the President for incorporation in such a code, with the proviso that such code provisions shall be enforced only by the exercise of the authority conferred upon the Federal Trade Commission in this title and in the Federal Trade Commission act.

Standards of Competition.

Section 3. The provisions of Sections 3(b); 3(f), and 10(a) of said Title I are hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 3(b)—After the President shall have approved or prescribed a code of fair competition, the provisions of such code shall be the standards of fair competition for such trade, industry or subdivision thereof. Any violation of such standards shall be deemed an unfair method of competition in commerce within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission act, as amended; but nothing in this title shall be construed to impair the exercise of the powers of the Federal Trade Commission under such act, as amended, in a manner consistent with the provisions of this title. If a complaint shall be made to the Commission, which is supported by findings of fact, made by the President after due investigation, finding that one or more persons engaged in a designated trade, industry or subdivision are engaging in unfair methods of competition in violation of the standards of a code of fair competition, such a finding shall be accepted by the Commission as a prima facie showing of cause for the issuance of a temporary order, which the Commission is hereby authorized to issue, directing such person or persons and all others subject to such code to cease and desist from such unfair methods of competition, pending further action by said Commission, which shall thereupon expedite the final disposition of said complaint in accordance with its authority under the Federal Trade Commission act. Pending final action such temporary orders shall be enforceable in all respects as are cease and desist orders under the Federal Trade Commission Act.

"Section 3(f)—When a code of fair competition has been approved or prescribed by the President under this title, any violation of any provision thereof requiring the maintenance of minimum rates of pay or maximum hours of labor, or prohibiting child labor, or prohibiting any Class A methods of unfair competition (as defined in section 1(d) of this title), shall be a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof an offender shall be fined not more than $500 for each offense and each day such violation continues shall be deemed a separate offense.

Six-Month Review Period.

"Section 10(a)—The President is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this title. Such regulations shall limit the exercise of any governmental authority in the administration and enforcement of codes solely to public officers or agencies of the Federal Government. Any violation of an obligation imposed by such a rule or regulation, other than an obligation to pay money, shall, if not otherwise punishable, subject the offender to punishment by fine of not to exceed $500.

Section 4. The President shall review or cause to be reviewed for compliance with the requirements of this joint resolution every code in effect on the date this joint resolution takes effect. In order to afford reasonable opportunity for such a review, such codes are hereby continued in effect (subject to cancellation or modification pursuant to the provisions of this joint resolution) for a period of six months after June 15, 1935, unless previously reviewed and superseded; but no such code shall continue in effect after the expiration of such six-month period unless the President has reviewed such code and has approved it and finds that the code in the form so approved conforms to the requirements of this joint resolution. All rules, regulations and orders heretofore issued and any agencies established thereunder and now in effect under Title I of the national industrial recovery act shall continue in effect until canceled and modified under this title, as amended by this joint resolution.

Fight in House Begun to Give NRA Two Years

the whole movement is inspired by code officials in an effort to continue lucrative salaries.

The Administration's latest NRA bill was introduced by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee. It represents the combined work of Democratic members of the committee with NRA officials, including Richberg, chairman of the recovery board.

Broadly, the resolution provides for the carrying out of the seven-point program indorsed by President Roosevelt, as opposed to the Senate measure, which prohibits all manner of price-fixing and limits codes to industries doing only an interstate business.

Besides extending the NRA to June 16, 1937, the measure:

Limits codes to industries which are "subject to the Federal power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce." As explained by Richberg, this would include industries and trades that "substantially affect" interstate commerce.

Prohibits "price fixing by concerted action," except in such cases as the President shall determine to be in the public interest, such as the prevention of "discriminatory price cutting," the protection of small business, and the prevention of waste of natural resources.

Requires that all codes contain minimum rates of pay, maximum hours of labor, the collective bargaining provisions of section 7(a), a prohibition against child labor, and the keeping of such books as may be necessary to establish compliance.

Sets up enforcement machinery for violations, which are divided into two classes. Unfair trade practices, which already have been ruled on by the courts, are made misdemeanors, subjecting offenders to $500 fine each day of violation. All other code trade practices are regulated by "cease and desist" orders of the Federal Trade Commission.

Specifies that the President, in prescribing rules and regulations, "shall limit the exercise of any governmental authority in the administration and enforcement of codes solely to public officers or agencies of the Federal Government."

Gives the NRA six months in which to review all existing codes and bring them into conformity with the new provisions. NRA officials contend that the Clark resolution, allowing only 30 days for revision, imposes an almost impossible task.

Approved by Richberg.

Richberg placed the Administration's stamp of approval on the bill, but declared at the same time that it is "not as comprehensive as I would like it." The Doughton measure, he indicated, represents the best NRA bill members of the committee felt they could get approved.

Adoption of the Clark resolution, he testified before the House committee would "simply bring rapid deterioration and disintegration of the whole industrial recovery program." He predicted that if the NRA is thus allowed to die it would add 2,000,000 additional workers to relief rolls.

A caustic debate, meantime, was kicked up over tomorrow's NRA meeting, which is expected to bring 1,500 business representatives to Washington. The meeting was called by the "Industry and Business Committee for NRA Extension" to protest the Senate's action on the Clark measure.

Referring to this movement as "The Save-Our-Racket Crusade," Senator Nye in a belligerent speech declared that the "transparent purpose of the meeting is to maintain code and NRA bureaucrats firmly entrenched in their pay rolls and to maintain big business in the saddle * * *."

"I find upon examination of these lists of the Industry and Business Committee," he told the Senate, "that an overwhelming proportion of the names are of code authority officials and particularly code authority secretaries. In almost all, if not in every case, these secretaries are paid retainers of the code authorities which in turn represent in nearly every case the dominant element of big business."

Treasury Bans Entry to U. S. Of Silver Coins

increase in the latter. Morgenthau refused to state the policy or formulation followed by the Treasury in its silver operations.

There have been indications that the Treasury does not wish a repetition of the wild speculation in silver which occurred several weeks ago when it pushed its silver price up twice in a fortnight and that it has decided to move cautiously in order not to cause further disturbance to the silver currencies of other countries.

Develop Caution.

In all aspects of monetary matters a more cautious and conservative attitude by the Treasury than formerly has been in evidence recently. This has led to the belief that the Administration wishes to dispel uncertainty about this Government's policies in the hope of encouraging steps toward an international stabilization agreement. In this regard President Roosevelt's bonus veto message is awaited with interest.

Morgenthau a week ago stated that this government was ready to agree to a stabilization of currencies, on its own terms. He declined yesterday to discuss the matter but it was revealed that since his speech this government has not received a single official response from another country.

Secretary Morgenthau denied he had any representatives in Europe discussing or sounding out foreign governments on stabilization. He said that Henry L. Shepherd, Treasury economist and statistician, is in Belgium at present and probably would go to France collecting statistics and information for the department. He also revealed that the Treasury had sent Professor J. Lossing Buck to China on a similiar mission.

Motive Kept Hidden

The Treasury chief said that Professor Buck—husband of Pearl Buck, the novelist—had not gone to China primarily in connection with the silver program but to report on the general Chinese economic and financial situation. Professor Harry D. White is en route home from London after gathering information there for the Treasury.

"Why is the Treasury collecting this information?" Morgenthau was asked.

"In order to find out what is going on and for our knowledge," he replied and would say no more on the subject.

The order making illegal the import of silver coins without a license was the first gesture of this Government toward assisting governments embarrassed by the Roosevelt silver purchase program. China has been forced to levy an export tax on silver; Italy to declare an export embargo on silver; Mexico and Austria to call in all silver coins—each to protect its silver currency against rising silver prices.

"As the price of silver has risen," the Treasury explained, "the silver content of the coinage of some countrise has become more valuable as bullion than in the form of coins, tending to cause its destruction and sale as bullion.

"A usual method of dealing with this problem has been to call in silver coins and change its silver content. An embargo on the export of the old silver coins is usually a necessary supplemental measure. Those participating in the importation into the United States of silver coins covered by such embargoes are aiding the violation of the laws of the country in question."

Kiwanis President Assails Dole in U.S.

Says Industry Can't Compete With Government.

By the Associated Press.

San Antonio, Tex., May 20.—Dr. William J. Carrington, of Atlantic City, N. J., president of Kiwanis International, said today, "We have abandoned the gold standard; let us now abandon the dole standard."

"The growing habit of running to the Government for aid, morning, noon and night is pusillanimous and must cease," he told 2,000 delegates to the nineteenth international Kiwanis convention which opened today.

He also asserted that "private industry never can hope to furnish jobs as long as it must compete with a Government to which it pays prohibitive taxes."

Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, former police commissioner of New York and commander of the Twenty-seventh Division overseas during the World War, pleaded for a restriction of the Federal Government "to the performance of its constitutional powers." He urged that its "vast army of tax-eaters be disbanded."

Reserve Board Council Scores Bank Measure

Advisory Group Assails Title II Under Eccles Proposal

Study Suggested.

"These doubts are not concerned with this or that detail of Title II," the report continued. "Twenty-five years ago, before the Federal Reserve act was enacted, a series of studies was undertaken by a national commission. Since then many different types of financial institutions have sprung up so that it would seem most desirable to have another detailed study made analogous to the one which preceded the enactment of the Federal Reserve act."

But if the Administration still thought it advisable to make fundamental changes in the Reserve system at this time, the council contended, the pending bill should be sharply amended. In the first place the council held it "essential to preserve the autonomy of the regional Federal Reserve banks," as provided by the original law.

To this end the council recommended reducing the Reserve Board to five members, with the Secretary of the Treasury and Comptroller of the Currency being dropped from the board, and placing control over open-market operations, discount rates and percentage of reserves in the hands of a committee comprised by the board and four Reserve Bank governors, elected by the 12 bank governors.

The council proposed that instead of giving the board full discretion to prescribe rediscount eligibility rules, the temporary section 10(b) of the Reserve act, which expired March a year ago, be re-enacted as a permanent feature.

This section provided that "in exceptional exigent circumstances and when any member bank has no further eligible and acceptable assets available to enable it to obtain adequate credit accommodations through rediscounting at the Federal Reserve Bank," the latter, under rules and regulations prescribed by the board, "may make advances to such member bank on its time or demand notes secured to the satisfaction of such Federal Reserve Bank." Such notes would bear an interest rate of 1 per cent in excess of the highest discount rate in effect at such Reserve bank.

Plan on Loans Hit.

The council also objected to the provisions liberalizing the restrictions on real estate loans. It would place authority over such loans in the Reserve banks, with power to direct any member bank to refrain from further increasing its total of real estate loans for any period up to one year under penalty of suspension of all rediscount privileges.

Another change proposed by the council was that the aggregate amount of Federal Reserve notes issued on security of obligations of the Government shall not at any time exceed $1,000,000,000 and that an annual charge of 3 per cent shall be made for Reserve notes issued against Government obligations.

In explanation of this proposal, the council asserted that Government securities should be the basis for note issue only in an emergency and that one of the original purposes of the reserve act was to eliminate a bond-secured currency, substituting in its place an elastic currency responsive to the needs of commerce, industry and agriculture.

Perkins, in testifying before the committee, said he knew of "no present or probable emergency that can not be met by the law as it now stands," if the former section 10 (b) were reenacted. Unless the modifications proposed by the council were adopted, he said, action of Title II should be deferred until "the best qualified minds in the country can explore the whole subject of our banking system, in the hope that a law may be enacted that will stand the test for at least a quarter of a century."

Dubious as to Results.

The history of control of central banks by governments both abroad and in this country "hardly justifies a belief in an all-wise exercise of such powers" as are provided in the pending bill, he asserted, adding that he had "a great skepticism that this idea of the centralization of control and responsibility will work as well in practice as it sounds in theory." He cited the action of the reserve board in regard to raising and lowering discount rates in the years from 1927 to 1929 and cited the German and French inflations to illustrate his point.

He objected to the bill because "it places in the hands of a board the power to dictate arbitrarily the money policies of the country." Perkins contended the bill's provisions would permit a small board to make possible the financing of the Treasury up to many billions of dollars and to expand the currency by more than $8,000,000,000 over its present volume.

Others who testified in similar vein were Smith, Howard A. Loeb, vice president of the council and chairman of the Tradesmen's National Bank & Trust Co. of Philadelphia; James H. Frost, member of the council and president of the Frost National Bank of San Antonio, Tex., and Thomas M. Steele, member of the council and president of the First National Bank & Trust Co. of New Haven, Conn.

first was Pope Leo XIII's Encyclical "Rerum Novarum," in 1891, which tried to dissolve the class struggle by the formation of a specifically Catholic labor movement, and with such considerable success that 40 years later Leo's successor was able to point out that the Leonien doctrine had gradually penetrated outside of the Catholic world, and thus "Catholic principles of sociology gradually became part of the intellectual heritage of the whole human race."

Social Doctrine Was Revised by Pius XI.

For finally, faced with the wreckage of the World War, the success of the Bolshevist regime in Russia, and the collapse of capitalism in 1929 in a protracted depression, Pope Pius XI reconsidered the whole social and economic doctrine of the church and reformulated the appropriate Catholic principles in his great Encyclical "Quadragesimo Anno," issued on May 15, 1931, the fortieth anniversary of Leo's "Rerum Novarum." "Quadragesimo Anno" not only established the principles of ecclesiastical Fascism—that is to say, the balance of interests rather than the system of economic competition, state co-ordination of class activities instead of the class struggle, and the family wage to workingmen rather than the so-called "economic wage" to men, women or children—but also enjoined upon the Catholic clergy actively to promote these principles in every land.

In this connection, it is important to remember that the governing system of the Catholic Church tends to induce a political system which corresponds closely to it. Italian Fascism is the most conspicuous example, although Lenin's organization of the Communist State in Russia was based on direct borrowings from Roman methods of rule. These methods include a commonly accepted body of doctrine, a hierarchy, chosen from the ranks of the faithful, on the basis of loyalty and achievement, to administer the doctrine, and an elected lifelong monarch. Such a system creates union and discipline and permits long-range policies to be developed over the generations.

Father Coughlin, of the Shrine of the Little Flower, at Detroit, Mich., despite certain aberrations in the monetary field and a distressing tendency to identify the Jews with the international bankers, is preaching nothing which cannot be traced back directly to Pius XI's Quadragesimo Anno and his subsequent utterances on the economics of contemporary capitalism.

Yet this is not to say that the Church will permit Father Coughlin to become another Savonarola. Rome has a very wise distaste for enthusiasts and is not inclined to encourage ecclesiastical politicians. The Holy See did one of the neatest jobs on record when it folded up Don Sturzo, the Italian priest who had organized the Partito Popolare in the pre-Fascist days. Similarly, the Vatican has not hesitated to leave the Catholic monarchs of Spain and Austria to their fate, and even to permit the supression of the German Catholic party, when confronted with political developments which rendered them superfluous or their position untenable. Therefore, those who see in Coughlin's radio crusade a threat of Catholic government in America go far astray. What the Church wants is the triumph of the Catholic principles of social justice, and the spread of Catholic morality, rather than the triumph of Catholic or ecclesiastical politicians.

Who is Father Coughlin, anyhow? Where did he come from? How did he get that way? What does he want?

Obtained Ph. D. Degree At 20 in Toronto.

The first two questions are easily answered. He was born in Hamilton, Ontario, on October 25, 1891, the son of an Irish-American from Indiana. Coughlin's great-grandfather, Patrick, worked on the pick-and-shovel gang which dug the Erie Canal. His grandfather, Daniel, was a carpenter in Buffalo, and his father, Thomas, became a stoker on the Great Lakes steamers. The father was taken ill with typhoid fever and cared for by friends at St. Catharine's, Ontario. When he recovered, he decided to stay ashore and got a job as sexton at St. Mary's Cathedral in Hamilton, where he married a local seamstress, the daughter of a recent Irish immigrant, thus making Father Coughlin 100 per cent Irish in blood. The Coughlin family was thoroughly Irish in its religious zeal and young Charles Edward was trained for the priesthood from the beginning.

He went to parochial school in Hamilton and then to St. Michael's College. This was followed by a brilliant course of studies at Toronto University, where he took a Ph. D. at the age of 20. He went abroad for a few months and then returned, determined finally to enter the priesthood. He was ordained four years later and was assigned to teach English at Assumption College, Sandwich, Ontario.

In 1921, he began to go to Detroit once a week to preach a sermon at St. Agnes' Church and two years later was definitely assigned to the Detroit Diocese under Bishop Gallagher. After assisting at various Detroit churches, he was sent in 1926 to the little frame mission church in the parish of Royal Oak, about 20 miles from the heart of Detroit, a small cure containing only about 20 Catholic families, mainly Irish workmen. From the start, Coughlin's forte was his Irish eloquence. Everything else was against him. The parish was weak and impoverished and he had trouble with the Ku Klux Klan, which burned a fiery cross beside the little church. Yet he represented an ambitious plan. Bishop Gallagher, who had been to Rome in 1925 for the canonization of St. Theresa of the Little Flower and the Child Jesus (a young nun who had died in 1897), thought it would be a fine thing to build a church in her honor in Royal Oak parish and had selected Coughlin for the job.

Coughlin fell in eagerly with his superior's plan. To help strengthen his parish and raise money for his church, he got the idea of using his gift—a fine voice and a sound Catholic training in Ciceronian rhetoric—in broadcasting, a weekly sermon. At first he obtained the use of Station WJR, owned by the Detroit Free Press. After a time he began to give a series of addresses for children. Then he began to broaden out and talk about current social questions.

Became a "Power" On the Radio In 1930.

This gave him his opportunity. In 1929, two other stations were added to his hook-up, and in 1930, after over three years' practice, he suddenly discovered that he was a "power" over the radio. He promptly organized the Radio League of the Little Flower and engaged time on stations outside Detroit. The response was a steadily increasing volume of letters and contributions. As the depression bit into the bones of America, he found that his talks on social and economic subjects were gaining him fame. By 1932 he was able to engage time on a Columbia hook-up of 16 stations, later enlarged to 27. Coughlin, backed by the Encyclical of May 15, 1931, was now a major political force. One attack on Hoover brought him in about 1,200,000 letters. Another broadcast, attacking Morgan, Mellon, Mills and Meyer, brought in about 600,000 letters.

He followed his attacks on the bankers and Republicans by broadcasts against the Communists. Then he took a crack at prohibition. Gosh! how the money rolled in! He was able to spend $15,000 a week and more for broadcasting time, to pay his huge stenographic force, build a 150-foot Crucifixion Tower and put up a $750,000 shell for his new church.

As his attacks on the bankers became stronger, the Columbia Broadcasting System which, after all, was brought into being by bankers, tried to censor Coughlin or shut down on him. Coughlin promptly raised the issue in his next broadcast, and Columbia was so swamped by protests that it abandoned the attempt to put the screws on the voice of the Little Flower. So the construction work proceeded until the tower was completed and the new stone church was constructed, although it still lacks interior furnishings. Coughlin has his own study in the top floor of the tower, while the lower floors are occupied by the clerical force which handles his mail and totals up the contributions.

Coughlin Is Backed By Bishop Gallagher.

The next move of Coughlin's opposition was equally obvious—to try to get him through his ecclesiastical superiors. Three times Cardinal O'Connell, Boston's majestic and Smoot-minded prelate, criticized Coughlin publicly. Each time Coughlin replied that the cardinal, while a high dignitary of the church, was not his superior officer, and he added to this observation an open accusation that O'Connell was ignoring the social doctrine of the Church, as set forth by Pope Pius XI, whose election by the College of Cardinals O'Connell had hoped to present. Coughlin is, in fact, responsible to Bishop Gallagher, who has backed him against all attackers. It was Gallagher, apparently, who restrained him after Gen. Johnson's radio attack, with its brutal personalities—"sanctified shell-game," "political bungling" and such—and persuaded him to come out again for "Roosevelt."

Despite the splendor of his parish church, Coughlin lives simply, in a little bungalow near the Church of the Shrine of the Little Flower. Notwithstanding his large financial responsibilities, he remains essentially a preacher. His voice ranges from a low croon, oozing with emotion, to a clear bell-like ring which recalls William Jennings Bryan. His style is a blend of biting irony and well-ordered rhetoric, which makes few concessions to the popular wise-cracks and the vulgarisms of the Huey Long-Hugh Johnson school. When he needs vituperation, he simply digs into the Bible for his epithets and parables—as do they—but his mastery of the Ciceronian method, particularly of praeteritio, that trick which orators employ when they say, "I shall not mention the fact that your father was a horse-thief and I disdain to refer to your recent incarceration for a statutory offense," helps him to achieve heights of high-toned denunciation where Johnson and Long pant along in the valleys of juvenile abuse and mere name-calling.

Coughlin looks his part: a round-faced, smooth-faced, pink-skinned Irishman, with that plump, well-padded look that goes with so many Irish priests. He wears glasses—but they are not rose-tinted.

Hunger March Converges on Illinois Capital

Final Vote Expected Today in Legislature on Relief Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., May 20.—"Hunger marchers" opened headquarters and welcomed their first contingents tonight as the Legislature neared its fifth, and perhaps decisive, vote on the bitterly fought relief measure.

Leaders of the Illinois Workers Alliance, organization of the unemployed, said this trek to the capital would be their largest and last—that the marchers would establish a permanent camp and stay in Springfield until relief funds again were provided for the State's 1,200,000 relief clients.

As the first marchers trickled in, Gov. Henry Horner and his supporters, confident his "fireside chat" broadcast Sunday night had started a backfire behind Republican opposition to their 3 per cent sales tax proposal, counted noses and predicted the 102 votes necessary for its emergency enactment would be delivered tomorrow.

Over the State, the thousands who went foodless yesterday were joined by additional thousands today. Gov. Horner estimated that the number exhausting supplies daily "from now until the Legislature acts" would be 20,000.

In Cook County (Chicago), bare necessities were provided about 10,000 of the neediest. The county relief authorities accomplished this by diverting for food funds set aside to meet their unpaid obligations.

Rent on relief stations, office supplies, and medical attention—given but not paid for—were sacrificed in this last effort to stave off actual starvation. The county commissioners met in special session but took no action pending tomorrow's legislative vote.

Clayton Smith, president of the board, said he was certain that, if the sales tax increase could not be passed on an emergency basis it would be adopted effective July 1 and Washington would advance the money to ease the situation.

take steps to assure execution of the covenant and to stop Italy's military preparations, the character of which is falsely described as defensive."

The message forced the council reluctantly to speed consideration of this delicate issue, which it has sought to side-step in recent months at Italy's insistence Rome be given a free hand.

Definite action was expected during the current session, which convened today with Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, temporarily in the chair.

The delegates faced the unwelcome task of proceeding with discussion of the dispute over recurrent border clashes between Abyssinian and Italian troops on the Abyssinian-Italian Somaliland and Eritrea frontiers—and the possibility that any firm stand against Italy's mobilization of troops in that area might cause her to withdraw from the league.

Warning From Duce.

Italy has threatened this action in the past and Premier Mussolini bluntly warned the powers to keep "hands off" in this issue. Both Britain and France desire to check the war threat in Africa, possibly by direct representations to Rome—but they have no desire to force Mussolini to follow the example of Germany and Japan in quitting Geneva.

The council, as a result, at the opening session carefully avoided the three major issues facing this meeting:

1. The Italian-Abyssinian dispute.

2. The Jugoslav-Hungarian crisis over Jugoslav charges that Hungary permitted terrorists asylum to plot against Belgrade.

3. The Nazi threat to seize control of the Free City of Danzig.

The delicate Italian-Abyssinian divergencies of opinion will necessitate lengthy negotiations, delegates said, before the council formally can take this up for discussion.

$303,000,000 in Taxes Paid by Truck Industry

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 20.—Ted Rodgers, of Washington, president of the American Trucking Association, told 400 truck operators from ten States here today the trucking industry in 1933 paid $303,000,000 in special excise taxes, while the railroads paid only $249,000,000, including income and property taxes.

Rodgers said he was answering a charge frequently made the trucks do not pay taxes for support of the roads on which they travel. He explained the truck excise tax figures included gasoline, license, and permit fees.

Preservation of portraits of the great personages of history and of the to-be-great of the future so that all who visit Washington might see them, is asked in a resolution introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

The building would house portraits, sculptures, and other works of art of "men and women who have been notable or may become notable in the history of the United States."

Proposed for the commission are the chancellor of the Smithsonian Institution, the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Senate and House Committees on Public Buildings and Grounds, and the supervising architect of the Treasury. The resolution carries an authorization of $10,000. The commission must report to Congress.

Europe Waits Hitler's Offer To Cut Tension

Cabinet Called to Discuss Conscription Before Speech.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 20.—Adolf Hitler issued a summons tonight for a cabinet meeting tomorrow afternoon before his address to the Reichstag on what the Nazi regime has to offer to alleviate European tension.

Political circles understood Der Fuehrer would obtain final approval for his military conscription law. The propaganda ministry, confirming the call for a cabinet meeting, admitted that the conscription would be discussed "in all probability."

Hitler, buoyed up by demonstrations in his honor yesterday at the opening at Frankfurt-on-the-Main of the first section of a new system of Reich automobile roads, spent most of today writing his speech.

Critical Moment.

He will again face one of his most critical moments tomorrow night. The largest Reichstag in history, although one of the most impotent, which now has 669 members, including 8 newly appointed deputies from the Saar, was chosen as the forum for Hitler's views.

"You take the initiative," has been Great Britain's constant plea to Germany's leader to alleviate the international tension. "We spoke at Stresa and Geneva, now what have you to say?"

Well-informed Wilhelmstrasse circles said London advised Hitler he should content himself with an army of about 350,000 men, thereby allaying fears of German aggressiveness, and join the revised Eastern security pact.

Hitler is said to feel, however, that the Reich's entrance into an Eastern pact is impossible, since France, Russia and Czechoslovakia have entered a military alliance and Lithuania has been friendly to Soviet Russia.

Mussolini Adamant.

So Der Fuehrer put out feelers to see if he could win back Benito Mussolini's friendship, but his Ambassador to Rome had to report that Mussolini was not to be won over.

Hitler next attempted, through Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier, to come to an understanding with Foreign Minister Laval of France. Laval and Goering conferred in Krakow, Poland, Saturday, but the talks apparently were so fruitless that Goering's report did not supply much for Hitler's speech.

One close to Der Fuehrer reported he feels that no matter whether he is conciliatory or not the great powers of Europe will try "to get him."

Hitler is reported to fear if he yields to the demands of the ring of powers about him that will be interpreted as weakness, with the result that these powers will immediately present additional demands.

On the other hand, if he shows himself unyielding, some of his more moderate advisers fear that foreign powers may invoke economic sanctions and additional boycott measures.

Although Hitler is anxious for a frank talk with Laval, apparently the French statesmen has little intention of granting him an interview here.

Virginia to Vote On AAA Saturday

Expect Wheat Control Plan to Win Approval.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 20.—Virginia farmers will vote Saturday on whether or not the AAA crop control contracts for wheat shall be continued in 1936.

Indications are that the program will continue to meet with the approval of wheat farmers in the Old Dominion, who will be voting in a Nation-wide balloting called by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. An overwhelming affirmative vote was given in Virginia last year and Virginia farmers who signed contracts received about $539,000 in 1933, and $570,000 in 1934.

Eight thousand farmers are under contract through this year. They control about 40 per cent of the Virginia wheat acreage and include in their ranks many of the larger growers, Henry Taylor, Federal-State statistician, said. Plans for the new contracts will be presented to the farmers at a series of meetings.

Check Offered To Show Graft By County Aid

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 20.—Tom C. Cundiff's check for $39 to C. C. Lee, indicted Franklin County Commonwealth's attorney, became the instrument on which evidence in the trial of alleged Franklin County conspirators here turned this afternoon.

Cundiff, under a 3-year sentence to the State penitentiary for assault and one of four who pleaded guilty to the alleged conspiracy on April 22, testified that the check, dated October 10, 1933, was part of his $40 payment of accumulated "protection" money he owed Lee, and that he signed it after Lee had made it out October 9. But the defense contended that the check was the first payment on a fine Cundiff owed as the result of his admission before a justice of the peace on October 10 that he possessed a still.

Claim Check Deposited.

A note on the face of the check stating the instrument went to T. W. Carper, clerk of the Franklin County Court, as part payment on a fine, was not on there when it was made, the witness insisted, but Stephen D. Timberlake, jr., of Staunton, counsel for Lee, asked why the Government had not read the indorsements on the back—those of both Lee and Carper, it was said.

"We expect to show that Mr. Carper deposited the check," Timberlake declared.

"Then why is it made to C. C. Lee?" Judge John Paul inquired from the bench in the Federal District Court.

Denies Revenge Motive.

Introduced by the defense was a confession of Cundiff's on October 10 that he possessed a still, written on a criminal warrant returned before Mrs. Pauline Cribb, justice of the peace, and charging manufacture. The Government previously had introduced an attested copy of a circuit court order November 16, 1933, showing payment of a $50 fine and costs for possession.

Witness No. 148 for the Government, Cundiff denied various statements he had made about trying to "get" Lee. He is to return to the stand tomorrow morning for further cross-examination, on the twenty-second day of the trial.

Oil Well Is Started Near Harrisonburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 20.—In the presence of 700 persons and amid oratory and music, drilling of an oil well was begun this afternoon in a little valley in the Brocks Gap section of Rockingham County, 40 miles north of Harrisonburg.

Another well, it was stated, will be started near Criders, about 5 miles from the one started today, by another company.

The "hunt" for oil and gas in the mountainous country in northwest Rockingham, which has been spasmodically discussed for the past half century, brought a crowd from many towns in the Shenandoah Valley. C. L. Souder, of Bergton, was chairman of ceremonies. Former Representative J. A. Garber and City Councilman D. W. Thomas, of Harrisonburg, made the principal addresses.

The well is being sunk not far from the Bergton School. It is financed privately and no stock is being sold in the company, chartered as the Bergton Development Corporation.

France, Fearing Power of Reich, Shifts Her Fleet

Mediterranean Craft Added to Force Guarding North Sea and Channel.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 20.—France is transferring her naval strength from Mediterranean waters, it was learned today, to protect herself against any possible danger from Germany's naval rearmament.

The sea force which defends the British Channel and the North Sea is being strengthened. Four torpedo boats and the destroyer Lynx are expected to be transferred from the Mediterranean to the channel fleet after maneuvers off Morocco in early June, along with other reinforcements.

This move coordinates the transfer of thousands of soldiers from the Italian frontier to fortifications along the Franco-German border, following Adolf Hitler's announcement of military conscription.

Praise greeted the return of the 1,500-ton submarines, Glorieux and Heros, to their base at Toulon from Saigon, Cochin China, after a 16,800-mile cruise. They are representatives of France's 30 long-range submarines, called a "battle corps" of submarine squadrons.

Within six months France has more than doubled the Navy's second squadron, responsible for protection of the coast from the North Sea to the Gulf of Gascogne.

In the June maneuvers off Morocco, cruisers of the first, or Mediterrannean, squadron will meet cruisers of the second, or Western Seabord, squadron.

Lack of Food Supplies, Natives' Chief Complaint.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 20.—Former State Senator Edward J. Colgan, jr., returned from the Virgin Islands today and reported the Territory "seething with unrest."

Isador Goldstrom, who with Colgan is counsel for the United States Senate Committee investigating complaints of natives, agreed with him that "conditions on the islands are much disturbed and unsettled."

Colgan said the two Baltimore attorneys, together with Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, also a member of the committee, heard testimony from 100 natives, a cross-section of the 2,000 complainants who appeared.

He said the chief grievance was the allegation of natives that they, without self-support, could not obtain adequate food supplies from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Murder Brings Arrest of Son Of McCausland

Gun Carried by Confederate Raider Leads to Fatal Quarrel.

By the Associated Press.

Point Pleasant, W. Va., May 20.—The son of Gen. John McCausland, famed leader of Confederate Cavalry forces was held tonight during investigation of a slaying.

He is Sam McCausland, owner of large tracts of farm land inherited from his father who led raiding bands during the Civil War throughout western Virginia and western Pennsylvania.

McCausland was arrested by Mason County officers after Howard West, 45, a tenant on a farm owned by McCausland, was shot to death today.

Officers said the men had quarreled about a gun once carried by Gen. McCausland, whose forces burned the Town of Chambersburg, Pa., in one daring sortie.

They added McCausland was located near his home at Carney, riding horseback and armed with a rifle and new bowie knife.

He spurred his horse when they appeared, the officers said, then pulled it to a halt, threw up his hands, and surrendered.

Prosecutor Stephen K. Vaught, of Mason County said, after the death of West in a Gallipolis (Ohio) hospital, that charges will be filed against McCausland.

The officers said West was found badly wounded in an automobile near his home. They quoted Mrs. West as saying McCausland had come to the West home a short time earlier and asked West to go to Charleston with him, but her husband refused to make the trip.

New Jury Rule Stalls Fairfax Circuit Court

Lack of Colored Jurors Is Cited in Quashing of Three Indictments.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 136-J.

Three indictments in the Circuit Court of Fairfax County, Va., were quashed yesterday afternoon because there were no colored persons on the grand jury and none of the grand jury list from which the members are summoned. This was in line with the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Scottsboro, Ala., case. This is the first time in the history of Fairfax County that such an objection to an indictment has been raised.

The May term of the county Circuit Court opened yesterday with Judge Walter T. McCarthy presiding and a grand jury composed of H. M. Palmer, Kenneth Dove, J. W. Jacobs, jr., J. Stuart Ball, George R. Bready and Ralph O. Ennis, foreman, was summoned. Six presentations by Commonwealth's Attorney Wilson M. Farr were returned as indictments.

Arson Indictments.

L. Louise Carpenter, colored, of Herndon was indicted for arson. Mary Lucy Carpenter, said to be the daughter of Louise Carpenter, also was indicted for arson. When the cases against them were called, their attorney, E. H. De Jarnette, of Orange, Va., raised the question of colored persons being excluded from the jury list.

After dismissing the indictments, the court immediately issued an order summoning a special grand jury for Friday morning. The special grand jury need not be summoned from the regular jury list under the Virginia law, and attorneys at Fairfax predict that colored persons will be well represented.

Other indictments returned by the grand jury yesterday were against Jesse Shifflett, charging housebreaking; Alfred Goodspeed, charged with larceny of an automobile, and Marvin Briggs Pinn, charged with larceny of an automobile.

Trial of cases for this term will begin next Monday and continue for several weeks.

Road Projects Are Demanded In Chevy Chase

Civic Bodies Plan Drive to Secure Use of $40,000 Fund.

Chevy Chase (Md.) civic bodies are being mobilized for an intensive campaign to secure use of the $40,000 appropriated by the Maryland State Roads Commission for improvement of Connecticut avenue from the District line to Chevy Chase Lake.

The Democratic Club of Chevy Chase has initiated the movement and will ask the individual taxing areas of the section and civic organizations each to designate a member to serve on a committee to obtain the improvements.

No Steps Taken.

The money has been set aside for the work, but no steps have been taken to begin the project, and officials fear the funds will be used for some other purpose if concerted action is not begun.

Repair of the roadway, removal of trolley poles to the side of the walks and paving of the Capital Transit Co. tracks from Bradley lane to the lake is included in the program, for which PWA and State funds have been set aside.

Will Petition Nice.

According to Curtis Walker, president of the Democratic Club, the street railway company officials have stated several times that the company intends tearing up the tracks to the lake, but nothing definite has been done about this.

The committee will petition Gov. Harry W. Nice, the Montgomery County commissioners and the State Roads Commission as part of the program for obtaining the improvements.

CONCRETE

SAFE AND SAVING

DOLLARS WASTED ON UPKEEP CAN'T BUY NEW ROADS

Inferior roads seem cheap and easy to build. They stretch a paving fund so that it covers a lot of territory. But after a year or two, the trouble begins! Maintenance costs go up and up. Soon all your paving money is spent on upkeep . . . and no more new roads are built.

That's why it's wise—and economical—to build concrete roads. Concrete lasts! It requires almost no upkeep. Each year, the paving fund builds more miles of concrete until the whole job is done—for keeps.

Concrete's smooth, non-skid surface is safe and satisfactory to drive on. It speeds up traffic . . . reduces accidents . . . saves motorists up to two cents a mile in gas, tires, oil and repairs, as compared with driving on inferior roads.

Get concrete. Insist on it—for safety, comfort and economy.

Roberts Urges Subways Here To Aid Traffic

Trans-Potomac Bridge and U. S. Garages Proposed to Motor Club.

Government-controlled garages, subways, and a new trans-Potomac bridge were urged yesterday as necessary for the alleviation of Washington's traffic tangle by William Roberts, people's counsel, speaking before the advisory board of the District of Columbia Motor Club.

Estimating at 10,000 the number of motorists who daily seek downtown parking spaces in vain, he blamed this congestion on the "stupid concentration" of buildings along Pennsylvania avenue. Declaring that private capital "can not or will not build adequate parking garages," Roberts said that "governmentally controlled garages, operating without either substantial profit or loss, could provide sufficient parking at rates that would not be too high for the average motorist."

Regarding the subway, Roberts said the Government should shoulder one-half the cost, which he estimated would not cost more than $4,000,000 a mile. He cited the large amount of money that would go "into local materials and labor channels" in support of his contention that the project could be considered as works relief.

Declaring that the proposed bridge south of Great Falls should be constructed with Government funds rather than by a private company which would charge tolls of an unregulated amount, Roberts said this bridge would form a segment in a north-south highway which would form a by-pass for heavy truck traffic.

Use of the C. & O. canal bed as a high speed exit from the city, he said, would relieve M street congestion.

Committee study of the proposed 1-cent increased gas tax was ordered by the association, through Charles C. Collins, AAA attorney. Others who spoke at the meeting were Mrs. G. C. Thorpe, woman's safety committee chairman, and Mrs. L. B. Cassell, of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Roberts also inaugurated an educational program to acquaint District residents with proposed legislation which will affect their interests and to instruct them in the functions of the District Government in the first of a series of broadcasts over Station WOL.

The talks will be given every Monday night for a year. In conducting them, Roberts will bring citizens before the microphone so that they may present their own problems to the audience. After each citizen has spoken Roberts will reply.

Roberts is now making a study of the reorganization of the District government and from his collection of material will draw answers to many questions involving the operations of District departments and the services rendered by the municipal government.

President's Order Fixing Wage Rates For Those in Works Relief Program

The President's order fixing wages and hours on relief works follows:

EXECUTIVE ORDER.

Prescribing rules and regulations relating to wages, hours of work, and conditions of employment under the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935:

Regulation No. 1.

By virtue of and pursuant to the authority vested in me by the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935, approved April 8, 1935 (public resolution No. 11, Seventy-fourth Congress), I hereby prescribe the following rules and regulations:

PART I—WAGES.

Except as hereinafter provided, earnings of workers on projects financed in whole or in part from funds appropriated by the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935 shall be on a monthly salary basis, the earnings differing according to various regions, degree of urbanization, and classes of work prescribed herein.

The monthly earnings are in the nature of a salary and workers shall be paid for time lost due to weather conditions or temporary interruptions in the project beyond the control of the workers. In order to be credited for such time lost, the worker must report on the job and be officially dismissed for the day unless otherwise notified by the project supervisor. Deductions from monthly earnings shall be made for time lost because of voluntary absence, illness, completion or postponement of a project, or permanent dismissal. In order to assure an adequate income to workers, the works progress administration shall make every effort to provide a continuous flow of suitable projects in each locality.

SCHEDULE OF MONTHLY EARNINGS.

Counties in which the 1930 population of the largest municipality was:

*Regions.	Over 100,000	50,000 to 100,000	25,000 to 50,000	5,000 to 25,000	Under 5,000

Monthly earnings applicable to a city should in general apply also to contiguous urban areas, even though such urban areas are not in the same county. Monthly earnings applicable to the largest municipality in a county should in general apply also to the remainder of the county in which the municipality is located, but need not necessarily so apply in event that local circumstances warrant a different rate of earnings. If the territory covered by the operation of any individual project involves the application of more than one schedule of monthly earnings, the schedule of monthly earnings for any class of work on the project should be the higher schedule involved. In order to allow for these and any other adjustments, the works progress administrator or his representative may adjust the rate of earnings for any class of work in a locality by not more than 10 per cent from the monthly earnings shown in the foregoing schedule.

The monthly earnings basis referred to heretofore and shown in the foregoing schedule shall be applicable to workers on all projects financed in whole or in part from the emergency relief appropriations act of 1935 except:

(e) Such projects, portions of projects, or activities as the administrator of the Works Progress Administration shall from time to time exempt, for which wage rates shall be determined, subject to approval by the Works Progress Administration, in accordance with local wage conditions by the agency having general supervision of the projects.

(f) Supervisory and administrative employes.

(g) Work relief projects under the supervision of State and local emergency relief administrations, for which, pending the transfer of persons working on such projects to the new program, present applicable rules and regulations shall remain in force.

(e) For Emergency Conservation Work and work relief under the supervision of State and local emergency relief administrations, existing applicable rules and regulations in regard to hours shall remain in force.

Lynchburg Girl to Wed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., May 20.—Mr. and Mrs. Smelzer Vernon Kemp have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Katherine Kemp, to Dr. Joseph William Houch of Harrisonburg, which is to take place June 1 at St. Paul's Episcopal Church here.

$19 to $94 Pay A Month Fixed As Works Scale

President Sets Up 4 Areas With Varied Rates for Relief Projects.

counties over 100,000, counties of 50,000 to 100,000, counties of 25,000 to 50,000, counties of 5,000 to 25,000 and counties under 5,000.

Rather than putting the work on a daily or hourly basis, the President's order provided that relief workers should be paid flat monthly salaries, according to the scale set up. It provided that these salaries should be paid for time lost because of weather conditions or temporary interruptions in the project beyond control of the workers.

The order provided, however, that deductions be made from monthly earnings for time lost because of voluntary absence, illness, completion or postponement of project, or permanent dismissal. Salaries in cities also would apply to contiguous urban territory, even though it may not be in the same county, and salaries in a county would be the same as those in the largest city in a county.

Supervisory and administrative employes are not included in the provisions of the order.

In a second section of his order, President Roosevelt provided that hours of work shall be determined by Hopkins, but that in no case shall they exceed 8 hours a day and 40 hours a week. Under PWA, the President ordered, hours of manual labor shall be limited to 8 per day and 130 hours a month. For clerical and other nonmanual employes the hours were fixed at 8 a day and 40 a week. For emergency conservation work and work relief under the supervision of State and local emergency relief administrations, present rules apply.

Under the subject of conditions of employment, the President provided that no person under the age 16, and no person so physically handicapped as to make the work dangerous to his health or safety, shall be employed.

"Preference shall be given," the order said, "to persons from the public relief rolls, and except with the specific authorization of the Works Progress Administration, at least 90 per cent of all persons working on a work project shall have been taken from the public relief rolls."

The order also provided that only one member of a family shall be employed.

Basis Is Surprise.

Establishment of salaries rather than hourly wages came as a surprise to many who had followed the progress of the works program. It was expected that hourly wages would be set, with possibly a maximum amount that could be paid an individual in any one month. In other words, a relief worker would be permitted to work until he earned a specified maximum. Under the President's order, relief workers will be employed 40 hours a week every week, except when weather or other contingencies prevent, and will be paid flat monthly salaries.

Wages to be paid relief workers was one of the principal disputed questions when the works bill was being considered in Congress. Senator McCarran introduced an amendment providing that prevailing wages be paid. This amendment was defeated after considerable debate. It was suggested at that time that an average of $50 a month be paid. Under the President's order a total of 80 different wage bases are set up, depending on the skill of the workers and the size of the community.

Method Described.

In every instance the wages set up are believed to be considerably lower than those prevailing and far below most union scales. There is no mention of labor unions or union scales in the order. The exception granted the PWA, however, means that workers on these projects probably will continue to receive scales similar to those now being paid, which in most cases are above those fixed by the President. The order also would allow the payment of union wages on Government building construction and possibly on grade-elimination and road work.

In connection with the executive order, the division of applications and information said that the schedule was constructed on the basis of the existing wage rate structure in the United States.

"The rates paid on this program in the 3,000 odd counties in the United States," the announcement said, "were typically determined by a local wage committee consisting of one representative of business, one representative of labor and the local relief administrator.

"In determining the rates to be used as the basis for the earnings shown in the schedule, these wage data were supplemented and checked by other wage information including Civil Works earnings, the Bureau of Labor Statistics data on weekly earnings in private industry, construction wage data, the agricultural labor rates compiled by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and the United States Employment Service placement data."

The announcement said that the survey showed a pronounced tendency for wage rates to vary with the size of the city.

"Similarly," it continued, "the difference in rates between general occupational classes of workers as indicated by the wage data formed the basis for the occupational differentials in the earnings schedule."

Issuance of the wages and hours order removed one of the last obstacles toward actually starting the works program and putting men to work. Last week the allotment board recommended allotment of more than $1,000,000,000 to various relief projects. These recommendations are in the hands of President Roosevelt, who is expected to act on them soon, probably today.

The Senate yesterday confirmed Morris L. Cooke, of Pennsylvania, as administrator of rural electrification. It was the first nomination to be acted upon under the new setup.

Oakland, Calif., May 20.—Ten days after he married Dorothy Fitzgerald Schuster, her former husband walked in and he had to walk out, William G. Schuster testified today in winning an annulment.

"The honeymoon wasn't half over," Schuster said, "when a strange man walked in and said 'Dorothy and I have made up, so you can go now.' I went."

Schuster said he hadn't known of his wife's former marriage and divorce.

Tablet Unveiled On Lindbergh Hop

St. Louis Group Marks 8th Anniversary of Trip.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 20.—The eighth anniversary of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's solo flight to Paris was celebrated here tonight by the unveiling of a bronze tablet commemorating that epochal trip across the Atlantic.

The tablet—bearing a profile of the youthful, tousle-haired Lindbergh of St. Louis days—was placed on exhibit in the Lindbergh trophy room at the Jefferson Memorial Building. There it became the 2,261st item in the aviator's international collection of flight mementos.

Mrs. Howard Bailey, a member of the Spirit of St. Louis Association, which gave the trophy, unveiled it.

The trophy was accepted for St. Louis by Isaac H. Lionberger, of the Missouri Historical Society. Two years ago Col. Lindbergh deeded his trophy collection to the society in appreciation of St. Louisans who backed his historic flight.

Because he requested it, public announcement of the bequest was withheld until last week.

Gunman Seizes Auto, Flees Accident Scene

South Boston, Va., May 20 (AP).—After his automobile had smashed into another car on the South Boston-Richmond highway, a man used a pistol today to commandeer a car driven by Mrs. Frances Perry, Halifax County health nurse, and fled, leaving his own wrecked car and an injured man at the scene.

The injured man was Richard Glass, of Clover, Va., a farmer, who received a broken leg and dislocated shoulder in the crash. Mrs. Perry had stopped at the scene of the accident to offer assistance.

"That They May All Be One."

The Pope's appeal for a return of the Church of England to communion with Rome should probably be regarded as a devout wish rather than a practical hope possessing any immediate prospect of fulfillment. Despite some steps toward rapprochement in the last 100 years, there still remain differences apparently fundamental.

The doctrinal divisions between the Roman and Episcopalian Churches are sufficiently great to daunt any spirit less sanguine than that of the Malines Conversations, which themselves failed although under the able direction of Cardinal Mercier and Lord Halifax. On the one hand, Rome stands upon the Petrine claims, the theory that the Pope is the legitimate successor of St. Peter, and that to St. Peter and his successors his Lord and theirs committed the regency of His Church. On the other hand, even the "Catholic Party" of the Episcopalian Church, along with Protestants and the Eastern Orthodox Catholics, combat the Petrine claims and assert that the Christian Church is "a living organism, one in heaven and on earth, of which Christ alone is the head."

But there are other differences besides the doctrinal. There are cultural, temperamental, political differences. The separation of Canterbury from Rome was influenced by these also, and since that separation the development of the two divisions has on the whole been divergent.

The desirability of a union of all Christendom no Christian can deny who accepts the passage from the Gospel of St. John quoted by the Pope on Sunday last, and used for our heading above. No such Christian will deny it is his duty to pray and work for at least spiritual union. Moreover, and again humanly speaking, approaches like that of the Anglican Church toward the Eastern Orthodox are not without promise of bilateral understandings which may eventually end in understandings multilateral.

Yet, as was demonstrated a few years ago at the Lausanne International Conference on Faith and Order, advancement for some while to come will probably be made only by every denomination holding its own creed unaltered while joining in a common tolerance and co-operating in the unlimited field for good works.

A Plan For Progressives.

In his address to the Wisconsin members of the Progressive Party, Mayor LaGuardia said some wise things and also indulged in some misplaced criticism of the Supreme Court.

He rightly emphasized the importance of a "real, honest-to-goodness platform that will have the courage to state in plain, understandable language an economic plan that will solve our present distress and lead the way to our future happiness." The country already has quite enough of the kind of progressivism that does not go beyond obstructionist tactics designed to checkmate reactionaries, actual or so-called. If the Progressives are to be a constructive element, either within or without the ranks of the old line parties, they must be prepared first to clarify their views and then to fight for them.

On the other hand, Mayor LaGuardia's assertion that "legalistic technicalities must necessarily give way to economic necessities" is subject to certain important qualifications. Constitutional restrictions, which the Supreme Court has cited as warrant for invalidating legislation which the Mayor of New York believes to be in the public interest, cannot be trampled underfoot without endangering the entire structure of our Government. Constitutional obstacles to untried legislative experiments are valuable precisely because they provide guarantees against hasty action which might bring about a far-reaching, unconsidered metamorphosis of our social and economic institutions.

If the people are ready to demand changes in the scope of Government, or in the relationship between the Federal and State Governments, not authorized under the Constitution, they know how to proceed. Mayor LaGuardia himself notes that the Constitution "provides the manner in which errors of the past can be corrected and guarantees for the future permanently assured."

The 150th anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution is approaching—an appropriate time for re-examination of its provisions in the light of past experience and present needs. If the Progressives agree upon a platform that requires amendments to the Constitution, they should be prepared to make suggestions as to how that basic law shall be modified in order to give effect to their program. They can not justly attack the majority of the Supreme Court for refusing to validate laws that appear to be in conflict with constitutional principles as expressed and expounded in a long line of court decisions.

The Balance Is For Peace.

Under the presidency of Maxim Litvinoff the Council of the League of Nations will this week consider the appeal of Ethiopia for international action to avert threatened hostilities between that country and Italy. While the office of president rotates among the members of the council in purely mechanical order, it is a striking coincidence that a Russian should for the first time hold the chairmanship at this particular juncture. For representatives of Soviet Russia have always been most outspoken in their condemnation of western imperialism. And examples of this imperialism more glaring than that of Italy's apparent designs on Ethiopia are hard to find.

Comrade Litvinoff, however, is too shrewd a diplomat, and Russia's present foreign policy is too realistic, to arouse expectations that the Commissar of Foreign Affairs will support the Ethiopian cause in a way which might arouse any Italian hostility. His influence will undoubtedly be cast on the side of a negotiated settlement, for one reason because Russia would now prefer to have Italy active in the anti-German line-up rather than wasting her substance in an unpredictable African adventure. But if this threatened war is to be averted, other factors than Russia's leaning toward backward peoples must be relied upon. Fortunately such other factors are in evidence.

Of them perhaps the most important is the discouraging report made by the Italian finance minister, who on Saturday presented his budget for the fiscal year which begins June 1. Signor Thaon di Revel anticipates a deficit for this period of around $140,000,000. That sum will be added to a public debt which already approximates nine billion dollars, a stupendous burden for a country of Italy's resources. Moreover, said the finance minister, the estimated deficit for the forthcoming financial period is exclusive of any expenses contingent on the Abyssinian trouble.

This revelation of Italy's precarious financial situation shows that any protracted campaign in Africa—and a war with Ethiopia would not be short—might easily undermine Italian currency and cause social difficulties of an exceedingly serious nature. For her own domestic tranquillity, as well as for European political stability, the need of a circumspect attitude by Italy at this time is obvious. To make Mussolini realize this to the full, without bringing too evident a pressure upon him, is the task of statesmanship which now confronts Geneva.

It is therefore welcome news that the British representative at this session of the council is Anthony Eden, who has already given ample evidence of his shrewd diplomatic abilities, and who is an ardent supporter of the Geneva technique of international conciliation. French support for Eden's efforts, provided they do not involve any breach with the Italian delegates, can be expected. And behind the Anglo-French overtures will be the solid strength of the smaller League members, who are now gathered in Geneva for a special session of the Assembly on the Chaco War, and who are unanimous in seeking to prevent the further blow to League prestige which an Italo-Abyssinian war would necessarily involve.

In the crisis the Abyssinians are playing their cards with a skill worthy of a country whose emperor claims descent from the Queen of Sheba. The current decree virtually abolishing serfdom in the primitive African empire is well-timed for its effect at Geneva. And there is also subtlety in the appointment of a French and an American political scientist—the latter, Prof. Pitman B. Potter, formerly of the University of Wisconsin—to serve as arbitrators for Ethiopia in the current boundary dispute.

Italy's financial troubles, Ethiopia's unexpected diplomatic talents, England's strong desire for world peace, Russia's much-advertised hostility to imperialism—these, combined with the famous Geneva atmosphere and with Mussolini's underlying common sense, form a strong combination for averting the particularly unnecessary and unheroic war which is threatened in East Africa.

Spoils Vs. Recovery.

Great Britain has been notably successful in building up a permanent civil service system which attracts some of the best talent of that country into governmental posts. In the United States, according to the National Civil Service Reform League, high-caliber employes "apologetically admit" that they work for the Government. Because the distribution of jobs as political spoils has overshadowed the merit system Federal employes are too often referred to as "tax-eaters" and "chair-warmers." Too often, also, there is justification for these slurs.

In its annual report the league raises a question as to whether an excellent personnel system "has not been a considerable factor in Great Britain's relative steadiness in economic depression and her quick response to remedial measures." The advantages of competent administration can not, of course, be measured with any degree of exactitude. But, in response to the league's second pertinent question, it is certain that the American people, and business in particular, would "have more confidence in the success of the Administration's far-reaching, ambitious schemes for social and economic planning if they could be carried out by administrative forces of the experience and competence typified by the British civil service."

No new wisdom is unloosed from this report. It discusses a century-old problem much as it has been treated many times before. Nevertheless, it adds an emphatic note to the chorus of protest against promotion of the spoils system along with economic planning by governmental agencies. Impartial observers, inside and outside of the Administration, are becoming more and more outspoken in their criticism of this rash inconsistency. Their advice is not the less important because the President gives eager lip-service to the principle involved and then compromises with the patronage hunters when that seems politically expedient.

Why Capital Hesitates.

The volume of new corporate issues, exclusive of Federal, State and municipal offerings, has been expanding of late, with April issues the largest since July, 1934. So far, however, there is no evidence that the log jam in the capital market has been broken, since most of the activity has been confined to refunding operations. The abnormally low rates of interest now prevailing, combined with the restricted outlets for investment funds, have created a condition highly favorable to refunding by companies with good credit standing. But the hoped-for revival of the market for new capital issues, which has traditionally followed this development, has as yet failed to materialize.

The belief that low interest rates are capable of creating a demand for new capital is true only with important reservations. In the first place the owner of investment funds is reluctant to lend for a small return unless risks of loss are also reduced to a minimum. Otherwise, he prefers to place his money in safe existing outlets instead of new enterprises.

In the second place, borrowers are not in the market for loans, even on the easiest of terms, unless they have opportunities for profitable employment of more capital. While the outlook for an expansion of new capital issues seems better, judged by the increase in earnings of representative industrial corporations during the opening months of the year, industrial activity in general at present seems to be on the down grade. Moreover, such improvement as has been recorded has been largely dependent upon the boom in the automobile industry.

Meanwhile, the railroads and the public utilities, which provide a great potential demand for the products of the heavy industries, are not in a position to make that demand effective. Relatively few of the roads are earning their fixed charges, and their situation is worse than last year. Passenger and freight traffic are at low levels, operating costs are high and railway wages have been restored to the 1929 basis. Despite the recent negative decision in the pension case, the roads are still hemmed about by restrictive legislation which limits their opportunities to reduce operating costs, while they are further handicapped by the delay of Congress in bringing competing transportation agencies under Federal regulation.

A major deterrent to extensive financing in the public utility field is the fear that Congress will pass the Wheeler-Rayburn bill in a form that will disrupt holding company organizations and subject operating concerns to restrictive Federal rules and regulations. Added to these factors, which limit the scope of refunding operations, and thoroughly discourage new financing in the railroad and utility fields, are other uncertainties created by pending legislation, such as the banking bill and the social security bill. Then there is the ever-present threat of inflation, which makes both borrowers and lenders hesitate to risk new commitments. Such obstacles to an expansion of activity in the capital goods industries can not be overcome merely by reducing the rate of interest and liberalizing the requirements for registration under the Federal securities act.

Poetry On The Fence.

Carl Sandburg once said that poetry is "the achievement of the synthesis of hyacinths and biscuits." Greenwich Villagers, after a discouraging attempt to market the "language of the gods" at 25 cents a throw, probably feel that it is more to the hyacinths than it is to the biscuits.

For the third time, the annual exhibition of the Raven Poetry Circle is again being held in Washington Square. The verses are impaled with thumbtacks on a fence along a thoroughfare bearing the disgustingly prosaic name of "Thompson Street." Here the Muse, pale and wan after 12 months' confinement in garret, basement or studio, lets down her hair and relaxes in the warmth of sunshine and spectators' smiles.

Lame verses, limping meters and halting rime are but three of the poetic convalescents that may be found taking the sun-cure this spring in the roaring city. The old chronic ailments, usually accompanied by spring fever, such as a paucity of capitals, a feebleness of ideas and a pernicious lack of red-blooded participles, are as prevalent as on the two previous perennial occasions.

The trouble with free verse is that the public only hears the first word and the poet only sings the last one. But, as these Villagers have yet to learn, poetry's place in the sun is much more than a mere matter of aspiration, perspiration and thumbtacks. With the 1936 attack as inevitable as hay fever, it is suggested that these patients from Parnassus expose themselves to inspiration with the humble hope that it may take.

"Alligators are harmless as long as you can manage to keep their mouths closed," declares a Florida trainer. For that matter, so are snakes and gossips.

Applauds Art Venture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to express my appreciation of your most recent "Art Venture." It is a magnificent undertaking and one of the finest gestures toward encouraging amateur talent I have ever seen.

I have visited the different exhibits and been charmed by the results of youthful effort and release of efforts evidently made by older artists—amateurs still, but with hitherto no avenue of getting a rating on their work.

I hope you feel the effort on your part is not without its merit though adequate compensation may be lacking—and that this is but the first of many such opportunities to be given to unknown artists in the Washington area.

I could not withhold this word of appreciation even though this year I have been but an enthusiastic "viewer" of your worthy collections.

Stein And The Messiahs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Certain critics, perhaps motivated by jealousy or more logical reasons, have long contended that Gertrude Stein represented the best living example of a devotee of an esthetic group known as the "child cult;" and it is quite true, that, aside from her influence on the literary forms of contemporary artists, she has contributed little beyond meriting a Pulitizer prize for fooling the public—that is, if we judge her by later work and ignore the value of her early experimental productions.

However, the material or intellectual removal of Miss Stein is an act that refuses to weaken a national inclination on the part of the people to flock into the ranks of various "child cults." I am of the opinion Miss Stein is of more lasting value than the new priests of Share-the-Wealth, Union of Social Justice, chain-letters and Utopia-in-a-nutshell. For this reason I am glad to see that an unknown H. W. M. has the courage to make an individual protest against the excessive militarism of an ignorant American cult that keeps its altar in a battlefield and its brain in a tin hat.

Arlington Dumps.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thomas Mechen's communication in your letter column called "Arlington County Dumps" reacts in the memory of Pennsylvania visitors to Washington.

So delighted and enthused with the beauties of our magnificent Capital, they crossed Memorial Bridge and approached the majestic Arlington—with Lee's home in the distance. Turning left, their enthusiasm had a jolt—a dangerous road with a rim of indentations or broken-out pieces with scarcely room for cars to pass—on one side a dump, on the other side a ditch where a car having overturned was being raised. They were told that scarcely a day passes without an accident of this kind.

For the sake of safety as well as from the esthetic side, the State and Federal Government should investigate.

A VISITOR.

Unfair Discrimination.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why must we be so unjustly prejudiced against the aliens in this country? Have they been really such a great liability to us? They have come to us already grown up, educated and trained ready to take up their tasks in life, all paid for by some other country. On our native citizens we have to spend 20 years of rearing, educating and training for obtaining the same finished product. Is it not the alien's mother country that has just reason for complaint? And what difference does it really make whether they are naturalized or not, except to afford us a means to harass them when they are not? In fact, their privileges are fewer when they are not naturalized. And the naturalization oath or ceremony does not in any degree make them better citizens, or would it anybody? We are good or bad men or women or citizens entirely regardless of an oath or a ceremony, of whatever kind. And harassment and persecution will but make anybody a worse and antagonistic citizen!

The Gen. Clinnin bill is a narrow minded, unjust and prejudicial document, and as a law would make an underhanded cheat and worse out of Uncle Sam. When Uncle Sam needed the immigrants to break his soil and do his heaviest work for him, he invited them with special inducements, with no condition as to naturalization. Now, when conditions have become bad, it is proposed that he tell these same immigrants, if they are not naturalized, that it will be unlawful for them to be given a job as long as there is a born or a naturalized citizen without a job.

Fully as condemnable is, of course, the Representative Weber bill—and there are several others similar to it—which would make it unlawful to give Government unemployment relief and employment to all aliens, and which would require all aliens now receiving such relief or employment to be deported, and for these purposes all aliens to register with the Government. His and Gen. Clinnin's reasoning seems to be that these aliens now are past their usefulness to Uncle Sam and for that reason should be gotten rid of. Why do they not include also starvation to death of all other people on the relief roll, and chloroforming of the sick, the handicapped and the aged? That would result in the saving of an additional number of millions of dollars.

ARNOLD J. MITCHELL.

Chicago, Ill., May 14.

Anent Lobbies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congressmen, including the brave Couzens and the bold Borah, vociferate exceedingly about lobbies. We know now that Couzens is aware of the Legion lobby and can put his finger on some of its personnel. Why does not Congress fetch this lobby out in the open and permit folks to see how the valiant warriors of the people would tear to pieces this iniquitous institution? Let the bold Borah do the same thing with the labor lobby.

Why not appropriate a huge sum to employ the lobbyists of these organizations. Buy their potent services for Uncle Sam.

Two birds will be killed with one stone: (a) They will save themselves the spinal chills and those gaunt, sinking spells in the stomachial sector when thinking of re-election; (b) The raids on the Treasury will be less costly. To be sure, the latter is of extremely minor importance.

Capital Punishment Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was pleased to read the letter of Mr. Briggs, of the Anti-Capital Punishment League, urging you to espouse that cause. At this time we are urging a greater measure of economic justice for our population. Large support is being given to the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill. The Nation is trying to make war unlikely by taking the profits out of it. Old age and unemployment pensions are being advocated. Efforts are being made for legislation prohibiting the vivisection of dogs. In the same parade of humane sentiments with all the foregoing should be found the standard of merciful punishment, the abolition of the death penalty.

Please let me call attention to the fact that a bill was introduced by Representative Kvale, of Minnesota, to abolish capital punishment in the District of Columbia and was referred to the District Committee of the House of Representatives. Those desiring its passage should make their wishes known to that committee and Representative Kvale.

Fair Question.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is a fair question, I think. Can Congress enable a section of our citizens to force the payment of a debt before it is due, especially when it includes a claim to interest only due ten years hence?

Why should not all creditors claim the same right? If the principle involved is sound in the one case, why not in the other?

Cheese, But No Pie.

Wisconsin is proud of its dairy products. So the Assembly of the State has passed a law requiring restaurants to serve butter and cheese with every meal costing 25 cents. The only objections came from a woman member who feared the effect of this diet upon the feminine waist line.

This action deserves a prominent place among the eccentricities of legislation. In days long past a piece of cheese was always served with pie, but the practice was not compulsory. Nothing is said about pie in the new Wisconsin law. Perhaps that State is not to be regarded as within the pie belt.

'Clouds Over Anticoli'

Post Office, Tuesday.

"I AM quite an obscure painter. My work must stand on its own merits. Who knows but that, in America where publicity so abounds, obscurity itself may not have an original drawing power."

So runs one of the letters of this Vermonter who made Italy his home and whose home may yet "make" his long loved village of Anticoli.

He was then within a year of his death. He had been painting since he was a boy at Hotchkiss and Yale, a boy wandering over Europe, North Africa, China.

Now, a boy of 42—though examples of his brush hung in the Stephen C. Clark collection and in many equally fine, if much smaller, private collections—he remained contentedly unknown to the critical world. He could look back on only three exhibitions of his works: At New York in 1916, at St. Louis and Winter Park, Fla., in '30 and '31.

Yet he was correct in the basis of his whimsical speculation. His friends—including such authorities as Robert Hale, who writes appreciations of him in the magazines of art, and Dr. Will Hutchins, of Washington's American University—were correct in their earliest estimates of his ability to survive, of his right to survival.

Today the New York and Chicago critics merely lead a chorus when they applaud the paintings of this "obscure artist" in the spring show devoted exclusively to him at the Syracuse Museum of Fine Arts, under the supervision of Anna Wetherill Olmsted, that Museum's director. There is to be a permanent Nathaniel Cobb collection.

To those who knew and loved Cobb—and every one of the few that knew him loved him—this news is even better news than it is to his 1935 "discoverers" . . .

"He brought to his work a new medium for oils," writes one discoverer. "The surface for his brush was gesso, a fine plaster on panels of laminated wood. The effect is rather like that of a fresco painting . . ."

We remember the little white-walled cottage on the Sabine hilltop, the quiet garden with its old, old fountain playing, and the quiet voice of the host, which was like the water playing in the fountain.

"How various his phases are may be judged by such pictures as the 'Fisherman,' a large panel of stalwart young men with a view like that around the Castle of Ischia—by nudes as delicate as a bas-relief of ancient Egypt—by fanciful little uprights of forbidding mountain crags and chasms and figures of some mythical age. . . . Portraits of individuality and early canvases that savor of the period when painters dipped their brushes in gold and scarlet and lapis lazuli; one of the best of the oils is 'Hercules and Dejanira'—lent by Miss Caroline Ruutz-Rees, of Rosemary Hall, Greenwich, Conn.—with an agile archer on the left, shooting across a chasm at the fleeting centaur and his prey. . . . After months in Central Asia and the Gobi Desert, he brought back oil studies as rapid and cursory in execution as the main section of his work is painstaking and pensive."

So of course the critics must debate whether Cobb was more classicist or modernist! As thus:

"His work, both in oils and pencil, is not in the least modern. There is in it an insistence on design worked out with almost geometric precision. He does not once surrender to the carelessness of modernity."

And thus:

"Mr. Cobb's work is distinctly modern. Year after year his color-schemes grew lighter in tone, coincident with a trend found in recent decoration. This became so pronounced in his latest landscapes that they will not stand a gold frame, but must be wreathed in silver."

"Was Nathaniel Cobb classicist or modernist?"

Let the professional critics debate the question as they may. Only Nat Cobb's friends possess the true answer.

Robert Hale knows it. Will Hutchins knows it. So does Louis How.

"A Cobb landscape should be viewed as one reads a lyric poem—not as a reproduction of nature, but as the representation of a mood."

Quite.

But also:

"All of his work is the expression of a man who knew what he wanted and did not rest until he found it."

What he wanted to be, and what he was, was himself.

Nathaniel Cobb was neither classicist nor modernist.

He was Nat Cobb.

They Can Smear Him.

IT IS STRANGE, and probably a reflection of the present mode of doing things the hardest way, that all the speculation about Mr. Roosevelt's prospects in 1936 center around the possibility of a third party. A much clearer picture of the situation would be gained, it would seem, by considering just how much he will be damaged in his own convention. At least, it is to that end that the opposing forces are moving against him at present. No one doubts that he will again get the nomination. The question is how he will get it. There is a potential opposition nearly large enough to deny him the nomination, however, and a consideration of it should serve to deny the rosate picture which the Administration forces claim.

• • • •

We start with Huey Long's supposed domain of Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi with a delegate strength of 58. There is a question, of course, as to whether Huey will be able to control any delegation except the one from Louisiana, but we are considering the possibilities. In this light, Gov. Talmadge's 28 Georgians must be added.

If the attitude of their Senators is a reflection of popular opinion, it would certainly look as though trouble may be expected in North Carolina, Maryland and Virginia, with a total of 66 delegates.

Mr. William Randol; Hearst had plenty to say about the California delegation of 44 votes at the last convention. Presumably he will have the same influence next year.

Out in Ohio Gov. Davey, who seems to have the upper hand in the State organization, is at loggerheads with the Administration. First it tried to keep him from getting the gubernatorial nomination and then he and the Administration openly split over the handling of relief funds. Ohio has a nice block of 52 votes. The Administration's troubles with Tammany have not been wholly ironed out. A split delegation from there, say 25 votes in opposition, would not be at all surprising. Frank Hague has heretofore controlled the New Jersey delegation of 32 votes. No one has heard of his getting together with the Administration, notwithstanding that Senator Harry Moore recently told of his warm devotion to Mr. Roosevelt. Before the convention rolls around Massachusetts may also become a trouble spot. Inasmuch as we are considering the maximum of possible trouble, as the situation stacks up at present, we will throw in the Bay State's 36 votes. This is a total of 341 votes. The last convention was composed of 1,154 delegates, of which the one-third veto power is 385.

• • • •

This analysis, of course, embraces a whole lot of "ifs." There is an "if" about every one of the States mentioned, in fact, except Louisiana. My information is that Gov. Talmadge, who until very recently had the Georgians eating out of his hands, has lost ground because of his personal attacks upon the President. He is still believed to be in the saddle, though, inasmuch as his personal aspirations are concerned, but there is a question as to whether he could control a delegation against Mr. Roosevelt. Also Mr. Roosevelt's opponents must be mighty optimistic to count on 36 votes from Massachusetts at this time.

The consideration of the trouble spots does serve to show the potentialities of the situation, however, and they may easily be increased before June, 1936.

It is not to be thought for one instant, though, that any such strength as this, even if it exists, would be permitted to register against Mr. Roosevelt. His nomination will be recorded as unanimous, in all likelihood. In other words, should there be opposing delegations at the convention they will be denied their seats and friendly delegations seated instead.

But this procedure will be decidedly new to Democratic conventions. It is an old Republican trick. It would not set well at all with the Democrats. If it is found necessary to resort to it, in fact, the nomination won't be worth much to Mr. Roosevelt. He will be very badly smeared.

And this smearing of him is the end to which the opposition forces are working now. It is not without significance that Administration influences have recently revived the suggestion that nomination should be by a majority vote instead of the traditional two-thirds. This would minimize the smearing possibilities.

The Growth Of 'Latinity'

France And Italy Make Every Effort To Heal Breach Of 15 Years; Historical, Cultural And Political Rapprochement Noted Within Past Four Months.

By Andre Vulliet.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

LIKE two sisters who have not spoken to each other for 15 years and who have at last put an end to their quarrels and fallen into each other's arms, France and Italy in the past four months seem to have felt the appeal of their Latin blood as never before and to have made the most of the word "Latinity."

Since January 7, when French Foreign Minister Laval went to Rome to meet Signor Mussolini, the two countries have been looking at each other through rose-colored glasses. With official visits, friendly speeches, newspaper articles and artistic manifestations, they are suddenly craving to make up for 15 years of estrangement.

"The Franco-Italian entente looks like a certainty," Il Duce himself wrote a few days ago in a leading article in the French paper, Paris-Soir. "There is no question," he continued, "that, so far as European peace and collaboration are concerned, an agreement between France and Italy, with their 80,000,000 inhabitants, is an element of stability and balance."

"That concrete and armed 'Latinity' represents an invaluable amount of historical, spiritual and political values which will be priceless, not only for the defense of its very existence and future, but also for the defense of the existence and future of the Occidental civilization, that glorious civilization which cannot die."

• • • •

NOT so long ago, in October, 1934, all the Italian dictator could say regarding France, in one of the most celebrated speeches of his career, was: "There is no doubt that, in the last year, our relations with France have improved considerably." And, but a few years ago, it was not unusual to hear high Fascist officials refer to their neighbor as "the decaying nation."

All this has been forgotten. It took no more than a few months, the rise of Hitlerism and their common fear of a Nazi putsch in Austria, to bring France and Italy together in one of the most significant about-faces of post-war diplomacy. Now, friendly manifestations are following one another in rapid succession.

Practically every single Parisian is becoming Italian-art conscious as a beautiful reproduction of the "Birth of Venus," by Botticelli, with her lovely plaits floating in the wind, is stuck nearly everywhere in the French capital. The largest exposition of Italian art ever held outside of Italy is now taking place in the Petit Palais.

Italy has sent 280 of its most valuable paintings. Never before had so many masterpieces left their birthplaces at the same time. As a sign of his personal interest in the success of the exhibit, the Duce himself has helped to select the exhibits.

"If you find the slightest obstacle, let me know," he told the French commissioner-general of the exposition, Raymond Escholliер; "I want it to be magnificent." And it is.

• • • •

ON THE French side, especially among the elite, the enthusiasm is running high; every writer has something to say about Italy and whoever has a few days to spare starts out to discover Rome or Florence.

Among many others, Jacques de Lacretelle, noted French novelist, thus evinced his admiration in Figaro: "Il Duce's look was enough to magnetize a whole people and to make them believe in their destiny. Il Duce's finger showed millions the sense of greatness."

Reporting a conversation he had with an old-timer who bitterly complained about the lack of liberty, the author concluded: "What is important for an individual is his belief in an ideal. The Italians of yesterday were devoted to the idea of liberty, those of today are animated by the spirit of sacrifice. I wonder which is higher in the scale of moral values and more fruitful in practice."

In the course of the last four months, six French ministers have managed to visit Italy in some official capacity. Foreign Minister Laval opened the fire in Rome, last January, liked it and went again, when he was accompanied to Stresa by tall Prime Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin. They were followed by Commerce Minister Marchandeau who, hearing of the rapprochement between the two countries, let no grass grow under his feet and started out to discuss quotas and tariffs.

A few days later, Rightist Minister-Without-Portfolio Louis Moran was in Ventimiglia, an Italian frontier town, solemnly to receive Cardinal Pacelli, the Pope's special envoy to French religious ceremonies in Lourdes.

• • • •

TWO weeks ago, in the medieval Palazzo Vecchio, among traditional heralds and a display of costumes such as had not been seen since the Medici Republic, the opening of Florence's spring musical season was presided over by French Education Minister Mallarme and Italian Undersecretary of State Medici del Vascello.

And but a few days ago, three planes zoomed over the Eternal City, made a perfect landing on Rome's airfield and out stepped another French Minister, Gen. Denain, head of the air department, paying an official visit to Pilot-Dictator Mussolini.

Meanwhile, slowly steaming up at the foot of Mount Vesuvius, a squadron of French warships came to anchor in the quiet waters of the Bay of Naples and fired the French navy's official salute to Mussolini and his renovated Italy.

A new Paris-Rome air line is about to be inaugurated, with Italian airships. A delegation of French industrialists and bankers has just taken advantage of the particularly warm feeling now prevailing between the two "sisters." In Genoa, they were shown around the steamship Rex and in Rome, they were proudly taken through the new villages built on what used to be a swampy region around the capital.

French masterpieces from the Louvre Museum are on their way to Florence, Venice, Bologna and Parma. French actors, of the famous Comedie Francaise, are just back from the same towns, and Rome and Milan, where they performed before capacity audiences and where Italian critics seem to have run short of adjectives to express their opinion. No sooner were the actors back in France than the singers from the Paris Opera left for Florence to give the musical season there that indispensable friendly French touch.

And most typical of all, a few weeks ago, hundreds of people assembled in the huge Palazzo Venezia at Rome, shouted and cheered, spontaneously raising their arms, like regular Fascists, toward a man who looked both pensive and scornful, as though he were wondering what the words "public opinion" really meant. It seemed funny that the wind should have turned so quickly. Benito Mussolini, Italian dictator, was being saluted by enthusiastic French war veterans in true Roman fashion!

Lindbergh Anniversary

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

TODAY is the anniversary of one of the most memorable individual feats in the history of mankind. On May 21, 1927, the young American, Charles Augustus Lindbergh, landed in France, completing the first non-stop air-flight from New York to Paris.

Lindbergh was born in Detroit, February 4, 1902. He took his first airplane flight April 9, 1922.

He bought his first airplane in 1923 for $500, and went up alone for the first time the next day.

• • • •

In 1927 he went to San Diego, Calif., to superintend the building of the air ship Spirit of St. Louis. In this machine he flew to New York, making a coast-to-coast record. On May 20, he took off from New York, flying by way of Newfoundland, Ireland, England, and France, and made the trip of about 3,600 miles in 33½ hours.

Had an angel flown from heaven to earth, he could not have been received with more wonder, admiration, and delight than Lindbergh received from the vast waiting throng at Paris, and no angel could have shown more discretion and wisdom and tact than were exhibited by Lindbergh. His character is as great as his intelligence; his courage is equaled by his wisdom.

• • • •

Since that time, he and Mrs. Lindbergh have proved that there is not a place in the world that can not be seen by man; their flight, all within an almost incredibly short time, from New York to Greenland, through Russia, to equatorial Africa, to the interior of Brazil, across the impenetrable jungle to the Caribbean Sea, and back to New York, makes the world seem small.

In "Midsummer Night's Dream," Puck said, "I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes." We have been doing that in less time with the telegraph and telephone; and it may be that 50 years from now—but who knows?

Thoughts While Visiting

NEW YORK.—The taxis here are so big it takes two breaths to climb in. What chance would an Austin have among these gaudy juggernauts? And once you're in you could set up a card table and have a round of bridge. Or tell the cabby to wait on a corner, send out cards, and hold a reception—under the roof.

Isa Glenn and I were walking up Lexington avenue just now, and I glanced into a parked cab—and there was John Barrymore reading a book. Very tanned and well looking, and unmistakable, but Miss Glenn wouldn't believe me. So she back-tracked, wheeled nonchalantly, and cast in an eye on her return. It was, all right. If I were "Odd" McIntyre I'd have put in my head for a chat, asked him what he was reading.

So we on to Brandt & Brandt, the literary agents, where we had talk with Bernice Baumgarten, young lady in charge of contracts and practically New York's No. 1 in the line. "She isn't afraid of a buzz-saw," says Isa Glenn. Constant readers, who don't see much of the fine Italian hand of literary agents, will place Miss Baumgarten better when they hear that she is the wife of James Gould Cozzens, author of "S. S. San Pedro," "The Last Adam," "Castaway," etc. They're fixing up a place in New Hope, Pa., not far from where George Dyer lives—he who wrote that grand mystery: "The Storm Also Rises" and set its locale around his own house there. See fly-leaf map.

Literary agents have even more books around than a book-reviewer; they stood in tiers all around this sunny, cheery office. Miss B. gave us a copy of J. C. Furnas' first novel, to come out in the fall and astonish the cognoscenti with its recognizable figures in the critical, cultist life of literary Connecticut. Joe Furnas is with the Herald Tribune. Also he ghost-writes those beautifully turned George Rector articles in the Satevepost.

IF you don't know Joseph Auslander's phone number the chill-voiced telephone supervisor won't give it to you. And Sinclair Lewis, who's been in Bermuda most of the winter, is out in the wilds of Bronxville and that's enough to make him unseeable. And Carl Van Doren's lead on how to reach Ford Madox. Ford doesn't work, and the best of dinner companions wastes his stories on desert air so far as we are concerned. New York seems to congeal right up when you want action.

What do literary people talk about? Just now it's the silly, sirupy telephone conversation which took place between a restaurant proprietor and his inamorata (see this week's Time) and were printed in the Evening Journal. Everyone goes around saying: "Mooey, mooey, mooey" and "Gooch, gooch, gooch!" And then there's considerable speculation as to how the lady drove off the ramp at Grand Central and landed upside-down in a drug store 20 feet below. They'll even take you by the spot and show you the new section of rail.

My vote for the world's oddest corporate title: "Comprehensive Omnibus Corporation." You see it on buses everywhere, and you wonder why they didn't call it "Whole All Co." and be done with it.

THE famous speakeasies, if the owners are heads-up, still thrive. Like Armando's, where the proprietor is as suave as our own Raman. Likewise these cocktail bars here offer the last of the range for the independent musician, the modern troubador. Arnando's has that jolly gentleman, "The Deacon," who sings with a twinkle in his eye which you could take out and mount on a ring.

Here in this pleasant little room is the favorite stamping ground of none other than "Prince Michael Romonoff," who can cadge drinks and make you enjoy it. Scarcely a modern legend compares with that of this chap born Harry Gerguson. Remember the time when he ran off with Paul Mellon's traveling bag? The police caught Harry, asked him what "P. M." stood for if the bag were his. "Prince Mike," he said.

New York's most famous literary alley is Patchin Place, a little hole-in-the-wall down by the Jefferson Market Jail. You'd never find it in a month of Sundays; it's Bohemia with a pin-hole entrance. Here once lived John Cowper Powys, Theodore Dreiser and E. E. Cummings. But the glory has somewhat departed, Ichabod.

My one piece of literary news that is news (Walter Winchell please copy) is this item which will break in about two weeks. Pearl Buck is to marry Richard Walsh, editor at her publishers, the John Day Co.

Now, if I come home, will all be forgiven?

Five Southern States Swept By High Winds

3 Dead, Hundreds Flee Homes; Rain Brings Threat of Floods.

By the Associated Press.

Shreveport, La., May 20.—Tornadic winds moved in a general disturbance thruogh five Southern States last night and today, killing three persons, injuring others and leaving a severe flood threat with deluges of rain in the Red River Valley of Louisiana.

Estimates of injured ran to more than a score from the fierce windstorms, while hundreds of persons fled their homes in the 200-mile stretch of farm lands along the Red River between Shreveport and Alexandria.

Much livestock perished while crop and property damage will run into thousands of dollars.

Portions of Arkansas and west Tennessee were visited by the blow as it skipped through the South, spending its force in fury in the Dothan, Ala., area, where two persons were killed at midmorning near Midland City and a third person seriously injured.

Governor Concerned.

In north central Louisiana the flood situation caused Gov. Oscar K. Allen to send Adjt. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, of the National Guard, and State Engineer Harry Jacobs to inspect the stricken area.

Alabama and Mississippi bore the brunt of the tornado today. In Alabama it struck first near Midland City, where Hughey Condrey, a farmer, and his wife were killed as their home was blown to bits.

A few minutes later the storm dipped into a small farming community 15 miles north of Atmore, Ala., injuring eight persons, two probably fatally. E. D. Donaldson, 24, suffered a broken back, and Alces Plant received severe lacerations when the Donaldson home collapsed.

At Utica, Miss., 15 miles south of Jackson, a Negro child was killed and an undetermined number of persons injured. Many highways were closed to traffic.

Rains Add to Menace.

Torrential rains added to the flood situation in Louisiana as the Red River left its banks between Alexandria and Shreveport. Colfax, a small community 25 miles north of Alexandria, faced the prospect of being marooned as the flood waters steadily rose.

Added to Louisiana's storm troubles was interruption of gas service at Baton Rouge by a break at Jackson, La., in the natural gas pipeline, which conveys the capital's gas supply. Industries were paralyzed and hundreds of families ate cold meals.

Southwest Storm Damage Is $3,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, May 20.—Between 300 and 500 families were being moved out of the Oklahoma City lowlands to escape onrushing flood waters tonight as the Southwest's storm dead mounted to 18, with damage estimated at $3,000,000.

Throughout much of the State, and in Texas as well, streams were falling and the floods, which accompanied tornadoes in a climax to drought-breaking rains, surged eastward and southward.

But as a slow rise in the North Canadian River heralded the reported approach of a 16-foot wall of water here, relief and rescue efforts were accelerated.

As the Southwest floods centered their fury in the region of Oklahoma City new deaths were reported in southwestern Oklahoma, where flood waters raged over the week-end; in the flood and tornado-stricken north and north-central sections of Texas and in Kansas.

At Altus, Okla., finding of two more bodies brought the total known Oklahoma flood dead to six. Five perished in a flood between Altus and Olustee and the sixth death was recorded near Tulsa, when a boy slipped from a bridge into a flooded lagoon.

The death toll in Texas reached 11 when John Finke, 40, a farmer, drowned after his horse stumbled while fording a creek. A number of other persons were missing in Oklahoma and Texas.

Kansas listed one dead, Clyde Miller, 38, a World War veteran, who lost his life when his automobile overturned into a water-filled ditch near Chanute.

The property loss from the floods in Oklahoma was due principally to washing out of at least six large bridges.

In Texas an estimated $500,000 damage was wrought in the rich Gonzalez farming section and $200,000 in Houston County.

Killer of Neighbor Starts Life Term

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., May 20.—Charles Henry Morgan was taken from the St. Marys County Jail here Saturday to the Maryland Penitentiary to begin serving a life sentence imposed Thursday after a jury convicted him of first-degree murder. Morgan is one of a family of 34 children, his father having been married three times. It was found recently that Morgan is suffering from tuberculosis.

Morgan confessed to the fatal shooting of John Thomas, colored neighbor, from ambush last October 22, but maintained that his employer, George E. Joy, threatened to kill him unless he killed the Negro, with whom it was brought out in the trial, Joy had had an argument over Joy's cattle getting in Thomas' cornfield.

Joy denied any knowledge of the crime, but was sentenced Thursday as an accessory to the crime to six years in the Maryland Penitentiary. He is held in the jail here awaiting the result of a motion for a new trial.

Russians Pay Solemn Tribute To Crash Dead at Funeral Rites

Speakers Declare Maxim Gorky Tragedy Is a Challenge in New Struggle for Mastery of Aviation Technique; New Details Told.

By the United Press.

Moscow, May 20.—The 49 victims of the Maxim Gorky airplane crash Saturday were given ceremonial burial at sunset today. War planes droned overhead as the Soviet government interred in the cemetery of the ancient Novodevich Convent the dead from Russia's third major air disaster in three years.

In accordance with the Communist custom, 42 of the victims were cremated, their ashes in urns being placed in crypts in the convent wall. The other seven were buried beneath the wall in adjacent graves.

All day long the coffins and urns reposed in the central house of the trade unions, former Hall of the Nobiles, while thousands passed through to pay their last respects.

The urns and caskets then were carried 3 miles to Novodevichy, Moscow's best-known cemetery, where the first wife of Josef Stalin is buried. The convent is famous in history, for Peter the Great kept his sister Sophia, his rival for the throne, locked in a tower there for years.

Death a Challenge.

To the slow strains of Chopin's funeral march, the urns and caskets were borne to a platform below the wall, where Soviet officials praised the work of the dead, most of them aviation employes or fliers. Speakers said their death was a challenge in a new struggle for the mastery of aviation technique.

Although Pilot Blagin, of the small plane which, stunting, crashed into the huge Maxim Gorky and caused the disaster, was bitterly attacked in the Soviet press and blamed for the wreck, he was buried with the others.

However, his name and deeds were not mentioned by funeral orators.

At the conclusion of the orations, a military band played the Internationale, Soviet anthem, and the urns were placed in their crypts and the red-draped coffins were placed in the earth.

Meanwhile, a dramatic incident during the Maxim Gorky plane disaster was revealed by V. V. Ribushkin, pilot of a third plane which accompanied the huge ship on its final flight, taking motion pictures.

Ribushkin said before Ivan Mikhaev, pilot of the Gorky, took off he warned Blagin, flying a small ship to provide contrast to the air giant, not to attempt stunts and remain at a safe distance. Blagin replied: "I'm no little kid. I've been flying for 15 years."

Tells of Crash.

"I went up first," Ribushkin said, "and then Blagin took off, followed by the Maxim Gorky and its passengers. I was to the left of the giant plane and Blagin to the right.

"Suddenly, Blagin began to stunt. One stunt failed (he was looping) and his plane crashed into the right wing of the Gorky, near the center engine.

"He evidently hit an oil tank, for a dense cloud of black smoke appeared.

"When both planes crashed I began to glide over the scene of the disaster. At this moment the frightened movie cameraman grabbed me by the throat and began to struggle and pull me back over my seat.

"I lost control of the plane and we went into a spin. With all my might, I smashed the cameraman in the face. He resumed his place then and remained seated until I landed."

Exchange Head Declares Goal Welfare of U. S.

Gay Stresses Duty to Public in Speech Launching His Regime.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 20.—Charles R. Gay, newly elected president of the New York Stock Exchange, sounded the keynote of his administration tonight with a ringing declaration that "the national welfare comes first and only those who make a definite contribution to that welfare will be tolerated."

Gay made his first public appearance as president of the Wall Street institution at a meeting of the Associated Stock Exchanges here.

The new president, who supplanted Richard Whitney as head of the exchange May 13, launched his regime in a speech studded with references to the exchange's duty to the public.

After paying tribute to the "experience and wisdom" of precedents, he said, "on the other hand we must be courageous to act when changing thought indicates a change of policy."

Veering further away from the former concept of the stock exchange as a "private club," Gay emphasized its importance "in terms of broad social interest."

Public Approval "Vital."

"It is no longer sufficient to rest our rights upon contract or law even where th elaw is constitutional. The point is that our laws and the right of contract derive their ultimate sanction from public approval," he said.

"This has always been the case. Today we recognize it more clearly than we have in the past."

Gay made an open-handed gesture of co-operation toward the Securities and Exchange Commission, saying:

"I feel sure that in the task of promoting the best interests of the security markets we can count on the friendly interest of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"The membership of this commission is composed of an exceptionally high order of public servants. They have the same desire to preserve the integrity of our markets, to protect investors and to serve industry that we have."

Would Define Functions.

Referring to public relations, long a bone of contention in New York Stock Exchange circles, the new president said the first rule "is to define explicitly the functions of the stock market."

"Disabuse the mind of the public of the still-prevailing notion that our security markets offer a royal opportunity to sudden riches," he added.

"There is no formula, no mystic system, no astral insight which will permit a trader to pick securities with a guaranteed one-way movement," he emphasized.

Gay stressed the way in which the net work of New oYrk Stock Exchange wire houses cobweb all corners of the country.

"Although the transactions are consummated in a restricted spot on the island of Manhattan, the security market, if we consider the location of buyers and sellers, is as broad as the Nation," he declared.

"When we amend this statement to include foreign participation the market is not only national, but also international. These observations apply proportionately to all security markets and thoroughly refute the charge of financial provincialism which has been leveled against us."

Life Sentences Sought For 2 Young Brothers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., May 20—When the regular term of the Randolph county circuit court opens here tomorrow with Judge John F. Brown presiding, Stanley Bosworth, prosecuting attorney, will present habitual criminal charges against George and Eugene Morgart, young brothers, in an effort to obtain life sentences.

The Morgart brothers, under sentence of five years to the state penitentiary for robbery, along with another prisoner, recently broke jail here but were later captured. They had previously served time for felonies, and their latest offense, Bosworth says, brings them under the habitual criminal statute.

Delano Expects Planning to End City Corruption

Municipal Experts Urged to Study 'Single Tax' at Cincinnati.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 20.—City planning is striking a mortal blow at corruption in municipal administration, Frederic A. Delano asserted today as more than 250 planning experts gathered here for a joint clinic on ailments of urban life.

Delano, vice chairman of the national resources board in Washington and an uncle of President Roosevelt, asserted between sessions of the conference, first of its kind in the United States, that political and business forces are coming to recognize city planning as a increasingly important factor in their operations.

"These forces, which formerly opposed planning because it threatened to limit them, are now discovering that planning is the only chance for their survival," he said.

An End to Corruption.

"And because planning tends to break up concentrated blocs of population, which can be swung as a political unit, these interests are losing at the same time the strength which enabled them to operate merely for their own advantage."

Delano predicted that planning, especially in smaller communities, eventually will put municipal corruption at an irreducible minimum.

During the day the conference, sponsored by the American City Planning Institute, the American Civic Association, the American Society of Planning Officials, the National Conference on City Planning and the City of Cincinnati—itself a pioneer in the movement—heard numerous experts discuss the manyphased problems.

"Single Tax" Discussed.

Philip H. Cornick, of the National Institute of Public Administration, New York City, urged the conference to consider principles laid down a half century ago by Henry George, nineteenth century economist, whose book, "Progress and Poverty," advocated the single tax and created a long-lived controversy.

Cornick called the desire of men to "capitalize anticipated future increases in land rents into present prices" one of the major obstacles in city planning. George's book, he said, argued such speculation "paved the way for industrial depressions."

Delano also predicted that the "submerged half of our populations" will get a "break" through co-operative planning in cities.

"We'll all be gray haired before it comes, but it will come," he said.

Federal Arts Proposal Gets Cool Reaction

American Arts Federation Is Lukewarm Toward House Resolution.

The American Federation of Arts, one of the organizations which was expected to give strong support to the House resolution which would create a Department of Science, Art and Literature, is lukewarm on the subject.

"In my opinion the proposal is not wisely conceived and should not be indorsed in its present form," F. A. Whiting, president, said yesterday in opening the federation's twenty-sixth convention.

"I fear bureaucracy in the arts, especially if in the hands of politicians."

Hearings on the resolution are now being held by the House Patents Committee, whose chairman, Representative William I. Sirovich, is one of its most aggressive backers.

Severe Year.

Though the past year has been a severe one financially, said Mr. Whiting, it has seen the initiation of several art projects of national importance. He cited the new civic museum of Boise, Idaho, which is nearing completion; construction of a community arts center in Colorado Springs, and the opening of the art museum in San Francisco's war memorial.

"These few instances indicate that even in these times of slow recovery from depression," he declared, "funds are still available for artistic enterprises, provided they can be presented in so alluring a manner as to fire the imagination of those who still have funds available for such purposes."

Treasury Aid Talks.

Edward Bruce, well-known Washington painter and consulting expert of the painting and sculpture section, Treasury Department, was the principal speaker at the federation's luncheon session at the Hotel Mayflower, where all sessions are being held.

He reviewed the accomplishments of the public works of art project which the Government conducted in 1933-34 to aid needy painters and sculptors. Mr. Bruce also described the functions of the Treasury's permanent art section, which was an outgrowth of PWAP.

"The Art Museum and Its Community Service" was the subject of a symposium held in the afternoon with W. M. Milliken, director of the Cleveland Museum of Art, as chairman.

Erudite Guards.

Guards who are expert in art subjects as well as police work take care of visitors to the Joslyn Memorial in Omaha, Nebr., the delegates were told by Paul H. Grummann, director of the museum.

"One of the unique features of the institution," he said, "is an almost complete absence of police atmosphere. "The guards are really men with university training. Members of the staff are shifted every hour to diversify their day's work and keep them alert at their posts."

The remainder of the day's program consisted of an informal tea and reception at the home of the president and Mrs. Whiting, 2611 Woodley place, and round-table discussions of exhibitions and school arts.

Missing Child Victim of Cave-In

Body of Girl, 8 Found Buried After Cave-in Child Was Playing in Yard of Home, Sought Since Friday.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 20.—The body of pretty little Shirley Evans, 8, was found today buried under a ton of earth in a cave 250 yards from her home. The cave had been apparently dug by herself and playmates. Death was by suffocation.

Discovery of the body, clad in the red gingham dress she wore when she disappeared Friday, ended a search by hundreds of police, Boy Scouts and Department of Justice agents who had combed the area near her Jackson Heights, Queens, home.

Neighbor Aids Search.

Finally, Taylor Putney, jr., a neighbor, suggested a search of an excavation in the rear of the apartment building where the Evans reside. He recalled seeing children digging a cave there.

The body was uncovered after ten minutes of digging.

Mrs. Pauline Evans, the child's mother, broke into frenzied weeping and cried wildly:

"I want to go out there. I want to do something."

No Foul Play.

The father, William Evans, a civil engineer, later went to the morgue and identified the body.

District Attorney Charles P. Sullivan said an examination disclosed no evidence of foul play.

Playmates of Shirley will be questioned. Sullivan said it was possible some of them knew the child was buried, but feared to tell.

District Wins Grade Crossing Damage Suit

Takoma Crash Not Due to Negligence, Appeals Court Holds.

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday held that a grade crossing accident in which two women lost their lives and a third was so terrified by the incident she lost her mind, could not be held to be due to negligence by the District Government.

The decision was given in a suit brought by Elizabeth F. Campbell, administratrix of the estate of Ida M. Hopkins and Edith Hopkins, "non compos mentis," by her next friend, Elizabeth Campbell. Mrs. Hopkins was killed, with Mrs. Mary E. Johnson, and Edith Hopkins is now a patient in St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Mrs. Johnson, it was shown, was driving her automobile across the Chestnut street grade of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in Takoma Park. An express train struck the car, killed two of the passengers and sent the third to an asylum.

The suit against the District was based on the theory that the Government was negligent in that a stop sign, knocked down many months prior to the accident, had not been replaced. The Appellate Court, in sustaining a verdict exonerating the District, said it was not shown that the presence of the sign would have resulted in avoidance of the mishap. There was a light on the crossing, and it was testified that the train's bell and whistle were working. Other motorists stopped, but Mrs. Johnson continued across and her car was struck.

Blame Is Laid To Motorman In Fire Crash

Trolley Was Out of Control When It Ran Into Truck, Is Report.

Blame for a crash between a street car and a District fire engine on May 8 which resulted in injuries to four firemen was placed on a Capital Transit Co. motorman, in a report submitted yesterday to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The crash occurred at Eleventh and V streets northwest. The car was operated by George Williams, of the 1200 block of North Capitol street, who was accused of negligence by a special committee headed by Assistant Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal.

30 Miles an Hour.

The committee found that the car was speeding at 30 miles an hour at the time of the collision, that the fire engine siren could be heard for blocks and that the motorman should have heard the warning.

"The street car was out of control at the time of the accident, because the motorman had jumped back from the platform a few seconds before the crash," the report said.

Warning Given.

The motorman failed to give the right of way, the committee found, and he also failed to see a warning flashlight, which was waved in front of the car by a witness who sought to warn the car of the engine's approach.

The committee was a fact-finding committee and was composed of Seal, Inspector B. A. Lamb and F. A. Sager, of the Public Utilities Commission.

Home Counselors Suggested By First Lady as FERA Field

Advisers of Housewives in Living Standards Proposed.

The training of "home counselors" by the FERA was suggested yesterday by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at her press conference. These women, the First Lady said, would assist housewives in setting up standards of service in their homes.

Mrs. Roosevelt's guest at the press conference was Mrs. Ellen Woodward, director of women's activities of the FERA. She said that, under the plans of FERA, women would be given an equal chance with men to fill jobs suitable to their ability and training.

Already, Mrs. Woodward said, 300,000 women are employed on work relief projects. Most of these projects, she said, would be continued. However, she did not know what the rates of pay would be.

Among the work relief projects in motion or under consideration, Mrs. Woodward told the press, were scientific and economic surveys, a national guide book for travelers, compilation of historical records, revision of tax assessment records, supplementary service in public offices, physical education, recreation, art, handicrafts, emergency home makers, sewing rooms for the making of garments, camps for undernourished children, dramatics and the making of road signs and historical markers.

There is under consideration, Mrs. Woodward said, a proposal to train women on relief as household workers in the hope that they might be able to command larger wages than before.

At this point Mrs. Roosevelt said: "I have a new project for you—the teaching of people who can be called by the housewife to come in and set up standards for her in her household."

Mrs. Roosevelt said she would like to see it proved that these "counselors" could insure standards that would be "decent and equitable" to maids and other houseworkers, and also profitable to the housewife.

Today Mrs. Roosevelt will visit the coal mining town of Bellaire, Ohio. In appropriate attire, she will go hundreds of feet beneath the hills to see the cutters, drillers and other workmen wrest fuel from the Willow Grove Mine. In so doing, she will realize a long-cherished ambition.

In the evening Mrs. Roosevelt will deliver an address at the "People's University," a school founded six months ago to provide courses of study for adults anxious to advance their education.

Roosevelt to Get New Spring Board

By the Associated Press.

Aberdeen, Wash., May 20.—When President Roosevelt takes a cooling plunge this summer into his Hyde Park swimming pool he will have a spring board fashioned here from a Douglas fir.

It will have just the right amount of spring, its makers said today. Flawless vertical grained fir, it measures 14 feet and has been tapered from 3 inches to 1½ inches on the off-shore end.

"Please take extra special care to select this board as it is for President Roosevelt's summer home pool," the New York swimming pool engineers said in their order.

Daniels Here, To Be Feted By the Szes

Ambassador, Mrs. Daniels Pay Visit to Son and Wife.

Envoy to Mexico Plans Return to Post Next Month.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Two of Washington's favorite persons arrived in the Capital over the week-end: the United States Ambassador to Mexico and Mrs. Josephus Daniels. The Ambassador and Mrs. Daniels have been popular members of Washington society for many years, having made their home here from time to time since the former served as Secretary of the Navy in the cabinet of the late President Wilson.

They are now paying their annual spring visit to their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Worth B. Daniels at their home in Georgetown, and though they will remain all too briefly, will be widely entertained during their stay. The Ambassador and Mrs. Daniels have been at their home in Raleigh, N. C., for some time, and will return there for a visit before departing for Mexico City early next month.

On Thursday evening the Minister of China and Mme. Sze will entertain at dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Daniels. The friendship is an old one dating from the time when Mr. Daniels was Secretary of the Navy and Dr. Sze was Minister of China on a former tour of duty in Washington. And now Dr. Sze is about to be elevated to the rank of Ambassador, much to the delight of his many friends here as well as abroad where Dr. and Mme. Size have been so popular.

President Roosevelt has approved a State Department recommendation that the United States Legation in China be elevated to the status of an embassy. And though Congressional approval will have to be obtained before this becomes effective since it involves an increase in funds, it is highly probable that the bill will be passed.

The United States Minister to China, Mr. Nelson Trusler Johnson, also a popular member of Washington society who has spent many years in the Capital serving in the State Department in various capacities including Chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs, and later as Assistant Secretary of State, is in great favor with his friends and colleagues as our first Ambassador to China.

Great Britain and Japan also have decided to raise the status of their respective diplomatic representation in China to embassies.

The last legation to be raised to an embassy was that of Poland. The former Ambassador, Mr. Tytus Filipowicz, came to this country as Minister, succeeding Mr. Jan Ciechanowski, and a few months after his arrival the legation was elevated to an embassy, and Mr. Filipowicz became the first Polish Ambassador to Washington. Mr. John B. Stetson was the first United States Ambassador to Warsaw.

In addition to the playground set-up, there is to be a "Wonder Tree," with surprise packages for the kiddies.

Mrs. Francis X. Callahan will be in charge of this feature of the fair, and among those assisting her will be Mrs. James A. Cahill, jr., Martha Clare Garrity, Mary Jane Cahill, Jeanne Marie O'Donnell, Nancy Cannahan, Florence Cahill and Gerry and Joan Callahan, children of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Joseph Callahan, jr.

An orchestra will furnish the dance music from a pavilion on the school grounds and Senorita Arguello and her assistants will sell dances for "a dime a dance."

The ceremony, which was to have taken place in the presence of many persons prominent in Long Island, New York and Washington, and for which eight bridesmaids and ushers had been selected, was performed in simple fashion with only relatives of the two families and a few close friends attending.

Dr. Peabody Officiates.

The Rev. Dr. Endicot Peabody, head master of Groton School, where the bridegroom prepared for Harvard University, and the Right Rev. Frank Du Moulin, rector of the parish and former Bishop Coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of Ohio, officiated.

Dogwood branches and white lilies were on the altar. The bride wore a gown of soft white tulle made with short sleeves and tightly shirred at the waist, where it fell into ruffles of the same material to the end of the train. Her veil was of tulle caught simply into a closely shirred cap, and her bouquet was of lilies of the valley.

Miss Patsy Rathborne, daughter of Mrs. J. Cornelius Rathborne, of Westbury, L. I., was the bride's only attendant. She wore a gown of heavy white crepe organza with an apple-green sash and a wreath of white lilies. Her bouquet was of white water lilies. Mr. Warren Delano Robbins, jr., was the best man for his brother.

Following the ceremony there was a small reception at Ronda, the country estate of the bride's parents, where a string orchestra played. Later Mr. Robbins and his bride left for a wedding trip and upon their return they will make their home in New York.

Y., a sister of Mrs. James Roosevelt, and the late Mr. Charles A. Robbins. Decatur House Open to Public For First Time

Washington Thrift Shop Benefits by Visitation Set for Tomorrow.

Tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock Decatur House will be opened to the public for the first time—for the benefit of Washington's Thrift Shope, of which Mrs. John R. Williams is chairman.

It seems fitting, because of the traditions of the old house—it was built by Commodore Stephen Decatur with his share of the prize money in the wars with the Barbary pirates—that the Navy should have its part in this exhibition.

Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant at the Marine Barracks, will have the historic place at the corner of Jackson place and H street decorated with flags from "cellar to garret," and sailors will be posted at the door, marines throughout the two lower floors, which will be shown with all their treasures.

And in the garden, where tea will be served from 3:30 on, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, will pour with Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Assisting them tomorrow will be Mrs. John H. Russell, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. William W. Galbraith and Mrs. W. D. Puleston.

Mrs. Barry Mohun, chairman of hostesses, announces that Mrs. William Flather, Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. Alan Kirk, Mrs. Vinton Chapin and Mrs. Brooke Lee, members of the Children's Hospital ladies' board; Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Thomas Ash Claytor, Mrs. Ira Patchin, Mrs. James F. Mitchell and Miss Christine Owen, of the Child Welfare; Mrs. Charles Russell Train, Mrs. Philip O. Coffin, Mrs. Alexander Legare, Mrs. William Payne Meredith and Mrs. Cresson Newbold, of the Children's Country Home board, and Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro, Mrs. John W. Turrentine, Mrs. Dallas Dort and Mrs. Daniel C. Long, Columbia Hospital women's board, will be hostesses in each of the rooms to be exhibited.

Business Girls Need Clothing Crisp and Cool

Suits of New Material Are Neat and Tidy After Day of Wear.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE TIME long since has passed when beauty and business were poles apart. Now the young woman who steps through the swinging doors at 9 o'clock and covers her typewriter at 4:30 takes just as much pride in her appearance as the lady of leisure whose daily routine is set by a date-book. This brisk young business woman realizes that being neat and well-groomed is decidedly an asset and that any money she spends toward this end is a good investment.

In the summer months her chief problem centers around her wardrobe. She must have clothes which are appropriate for the business world. She must have dresses which are easy to keep spotlessly clean and do not wrinkle and crease at the least provocation. At the same time they must be light and cool to be comfortable.

One of her best bets for the summer season is a white Congo cloth suit. A local store is featuring these for the budget-minded, discriminating young business woman.

You can tell at a glance they're "air-cooled." But you might not realize at first that they're wrinkle proof. Wear one, though. Wear it all day, give it the hardest kind of wear and you'll be amazed, delighted and downright thrilled to see how neat and tidy it is and how devoid of wrinkles.

These attractive little business suits come in either double or single breasted styles, with plain, tailored skirts. They cost only $13.95.

A chic two-piece swagger suit of the same white Congo cloth has Dolman sleeves and trim leather buttons. This serves a double purpose. There's the suit complete and then, too, you have the smart little swagger coat which you may wear with any of your other summer frocks. These swaggerettes are $16.95.

A New Rose Perfume.

Wild roses have a dainty illusive scent that typifies spring. Perfumers have long wondered how to capture it so that we in the city might enjoy the illusion of strolling down a country lane on a late summer afternoon while a soft breeze wafts this faint rose fragrance. It was a difficult thing to do. The scent is so light, so subtle that to produce a perfume as delicately fragrant seemed at first impossible. Guess who finally succeeded? A young woman who in recent years has succeeded in making a name for herself in the perfume world.

Those of you who appreciate good perfumes and who want a light, lovely fragrance for summer, do by all means ask about this one.

Polish Makes the Shoes.

There's one shoe polish or cleanser which literally laughs at dirt. It keeps buck, suede, canvas, kid or calf shoes snowy white the season through.

You pay 25 cents for a large bottle and this will last you for months and months at the rate of a cleaning every day.

Before you plunge heedlessly into buying just any white polish, remember that the type of polish you select determines the chic appearance of your shoes. While they are brand-new there's little to worry about. But let them lose their newness and it's the polish that decides their fate. They'll either look old before their time and smudgy and dingy, or else they'll continue to be snow white and spruce. Here is one polish which you can depend on to prolong the life and beauty of your summer shoes.

A Stimulous to Work.

The surest way to make your desk more attractive and more useful is to purchase one of the six-piece desk sets featured in a downtown store.

These come with green, yellow and rose blotters against matching or contrasting leather holders. Besides the pad there is a rocker blotter, a calendar, an ink well, a letter holder and a letter opener.

These are modestly priced at $2.95.

How To KEEP WELL

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Fractures: What to Do.

THERE are many cardinal points that should be known to all in the management of an injured person who has sustained a fracture.

In the first place, what we call surgical shock may dominate the situation. It is the nervous reaction of the individual to an injury. The patient may be pale, the skin feel clammy and damp and the extremities be unusually cold. When asked how he feels, the injured person may reply "all right" or "fine," but this response may not reflect the true situation. Unless relieved the shock may be attended with serious consequences. To combat shock do not move the patient, but keep him warm, using heat if procurable, such as thoroughly wrapped hot dinner plates, heated flat irons, hot water bottles, or mason jars filled with hot water. The only stimulants that need to be given are hot coffee or a teaspoonful or two of aromatic spirits of ammonia. If a physician is present a hypodermic of morphine will assist.

As soon as the patient is warm and comfortable the gentlest kind of examination should be made to determine the extent of the injury. Clothing need not be removed unless it can be cut away with shears or a very sharp knife. If a fracture can not be detected and the patient is obviously injured, assume that a fracture has occurred and proceed to render the injured part immovable. A tightly rolled umbrella, a cane, two or three strips of lath tied together, a thin board from a picket fence and scores of other objects will serve. Wrap one or more of these with strips of cloth torn from any source and fasten to the injured arm or leg. Splints may be tied firmly outside the clothing and thus protect the part from further injury when removal to a hospital is undertaken.

Extreme care in transportation is a rule that must not be violated. Caution and deliberation are more important than speed, and every possible jar must be avoided. Keep the patient in either a horizontal position or with the feet somewhat elevated.

If on arrival at the hospital shock has passed and the patient's face has assumed its normal color the surgeon may give attention to adjusting the injured bone. It is sometimes wiser to permit 24 hours or more to elapse before setting the fracture.

If an external wound exists it may become infected with one or both of two particularly dangerous bacilli—the tetanus organism that causes lockjaw or the gas baccilli. For each of these antitoxin may be obtained.

We must remind ourselves that fractures will not heal as rapidly as soft tissues; that in order to heal the fragments must be closely approximated in correct position and kept immovable, as movement of more than a slight degree will deter the deposit of bone cells and prevent firm union.

Modern surgery can point the way to the restoration of form and function in fractures of great severity. We must aid nature with skill and patience.

Spiritual Approach to Wood Carving Emphasized at Famed Tryon School

Underwood & Underwood.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

YOUNG HANDS active with plane and chisel, carving spiritual life from a tree stump—eagerly inspired fingers, weaving God into a homespun warp—that's life at Tryon, high in the hills of North Carolina. It's the little world of activity created 35 years ago when two young girls, educated beyond their times, decided to give their lives to the children of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Eleanor P. Vance, internationally known wood carver, and Charlotte L. Yale, instructor in toy making and handicraft, are in Washington today, the first time since their youth. Honored guests of Mrs. Roosevelt at a White House luncheon, these two gray-haired women are viewing Capital wonders through the eyes of their young mountain pupils.

"We must see all the beautiful things," explained the cherubic Miss Vance yesterday. "Our 'children' expect us to bring it all back to them complete. Our experience at the White House will always be memorable. We became acquainted with Mrs. Roosevelt last year. She dropped in at our toy shop on one of her trips through the South."

Teach Religion, Handicraft.

Work of the hands, believe these unusual missionaries, as well as mental tasks should be approached with spiritual awareness if true achievement is to be attained. For this reason, they have always intermingled religious teachings with their handicraft instructions.

"The mountain children are deeply religious by nature," said Miss Yale. "They grasp the true significance of Bibical passages that would be lost to the crowded consciousness of the average city child. For instance, when I quote from Exodus about the 'cunning of hand and the willing spirit' they accept cunning in its true sense. Not so the city child, whose mind becomes confused with a variety of inaccurate interpretations."

"You can not divorce the spiritual from hand skill and achieve excellence," contributed Miss Vance. "They belong together. It is spiritual awareness during a task that accounts for inspiration. We teach our pupils to approach their work with faith and reverence. The effort becomes ennobling, the ultimate goal worth attaining.

How did this all start? How did two spirited young girls, one from New York and one from Illinois, come together in the first place?

Studied In Europe.

"We wanted to be missionaries," exclaimed Miss Yale, her dark eyes twinkling. "We met at missionary school in Chicago. I had just finished at Oberlin. Miss Vance had already distinguished herself as a student of wood carving at the American Art School at Cincinnati."

So the two girls went to Europe to cultivate their talents further. Miss Vance studied furniture reproduction and wood carving at both Oxford and Warwick, under the masters of the day. Miss Yale traveled from village to village learning all she could about peasant skills and handicraft.

The next chapter of their life opened with the two girls visiting in a cabin on the Biltmore Estate, owned by Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt, in the North Carolina mountains. The large tracts of land are now combined in the famous Applachian Park.

Encouraged by Mr. Vanderbilt, Miss Vance and Miss Yale decided to launch their first missionary work among the children of the estate's employes. They opened a class in wood carving, with four small boys as students. The number soon grew to include more than 60 boys and girls.

Other handicraft classes opened and housewives sought the cabin school to master the art of needle work, designing and weaving.

Mrs. Yale visited the homes and helped the women repair and set up their long-discarded looms. They wove and even manufactured dyes for their family garments.

Financed by Vanderbilt.

Later Mr. Vanderbilt, interested in the project, known as the "Vanderbilt Industries," financed Miss Vance and Miss Yale on a trip to Ireland and Scotland to study the making of homespun garments. This opened a ready market for the Southern made garments, although they weren't yet put on a commercial basis.

After Mr. Vanderbilt's death, Mr. F. L. Seely, of Asheville, bought all the Vanderbilt Industries and developed them commercially. This put an end to the missionary activities of the two women, but provided their ex-students with jobs.

"So we moved down the mountain-side to Tryon, expecting to retire into a peaceful old age," smiled Miss Vance. But it wasn't long before the mountain parents, having heard about what was done at the Biltmore estate, begged the two women to teach their young ones some useful trades and skills.

"We began all over again with four or five boys," said Miss Yale. "Our little cottage soon became a crowded school, where boys and girls spent the long hours, learning such skills as wood carving, toy making, furniture reproduction and handicraft. We had to buy a larger place and make continual additions to accommodate our young pupils."

Recently the two women indulged a personal whim and built themselves a Swiss chalet in which to live. The little home is a model of workmanship, the panneling and detail work carired out by their more skillful students. It sets high in the mountains overlooking their toy shop and cottage class rooms—a picturesque sight that invariably excites the curiosity of tourists through the country.

For Women
PAST 45

AT this critical age, women often become cranky and irritable. Everything annoys them. They complain of headaches, dizzy spells and hot flushes. Don't blame them. They are sick.

Doctors say women between 45 and 50 suffer from lack of a hormone, or gland activator, required to keep their organs in harmony. They prescribe this hormone to relieve the nervous symptoms. By an exclusive arrangement, this female hormone is imported from Europe and combined with ovarian substance in Zo-ak Tablets.

Try Zo-ak Tablets for a month. If it does not relieve the nervous symptoms described above, your money will be cheerfully refunded. Ask for the orange wrapper Zo-ak—for women. This BUSINESS of LIVING

Here's Job and Friends for Boy Who Signed Self "Unemployed."

By Mary Haworth.

THE YOUNG MAN whose letter (signed "Unemployed") was published through this column Sunday, is invited to get in touch with Mrs. C. N. Williams, 1431 Meridian place northwest, telephone COlumbia 6614. Wife of a minister, mother of a son who died, Mrs. Williams' voice broke as she expressed today an urgent desire to know and help "Unemployed," the 24-year-old college graduate whose parents "caustically expressed a preference that he live away from home," because "the neighbors' asumption of failure hurt them," who for the past year have sent him $5 a week ("They are poor and can afford no more") which he expends as follows: $3 each week for room, $1.25 for food, 50 cents for "a kind of sleeping potion" and the remaining 25 cents for razor blades, laundry and occasional haircuts.

* * * *

"Monday, Wednesday and Friday (he wrote) I look for any kind of work, but without success. Hunger, plus the potion, keeps me in bed the other days. I am denied Government assistance because of an 'income.' . . . Knowing no one in the city and too poor for recreation, I live in a world entirely my own. About once a month some one in the street says something cheerful or funny and the landlady always says 'Thank you,' but this interchange is scarcely enough to break the emotional torpor. . . . Will the chance at a job providing enough to eat and an interest in life revive the emotions, remove the indifference and torpor? Or do the emotions atrophy with disuse?"

* * * *

The sincerity of Mrs. Williams' telephoned offer to help was revealed when, with scarcely an instant's hesitation, she cast aside the cloak of obviously preferred anonymity to say: "Yes, if you think it necessary—print the name, the address, the telephone number, anything. We want so much to help that boy if we can. We should be so glad to give him his meals; to have him enjoy our home; to help him gain a new outlook on life. We have a piano, a radio, we could give him week-ends at the beach——."

* * * *

When some attempt was made to express appreciation of her generosity, her humane interest, Mrs. Williams replied in a voice altered by imminent tears: "We had a son of our own. We lost him. I had thought by this time every mother in Washington who read his letter would have called you. But I felt, even so, we must enter our services in the list."

* * * *

Such a display of spiritual courage and generosity—dictated by genuine mother love—deserves a response in kind. Surely "Unemployed" will concede to Mrs. Williams the courtesy of accepting the help he needs, which she is eager and able to give. M. H.

FOOTNOTE: If "Unemployed" will call this office, NAtional 4200, Branch 343, he will be put in touch with a local business man who has volunteered to give him a month to six weeks' try-out in a department store job. "If he makes good, the job may be permanent. In any event, it's a chance for him to get on his feet," said the man who made the offer. M. H.

Favorite Summer Delicacy Needs Careful Wooing for Perfection.

By Dorothea Duncan.

SUMMER'S favorite cake, a golden sponge, needs careful coaxing before it can be induced to leave the pan. The cell walls of the sponge cake are so delicate that the cake can not hold its own weight until stiffened slightly by cooling. A deep pan with an extended tube and movable slides is the ideal pan for sponge cake, because it provides circulation of air while the cake cools, crisping the crust nicely.

The sponge cake should never be removed from the pan while warm. Immediately after removing the cake from the oven, invert the pan on a wire cake rack. Let the cake hang in the pan one hour or until it is cold. The cake should be removed from the pan as soon as it becomes cold, otherwise it may stick or the crust may roll off in balls.

When the cake is cold, turn the pan right side up. Loosen the cake first by inserting a spatula between the cake and the sides of the pan until tip touches bottom, and press gently against the sides of the pan, cutting away clinging cake. Then loosen the cake around the tube with the aid of a slender knife or cake tester. If your pan has movable slides, loosen the cake from the bottom of the pan by inserting the spatula through the slots and sliding it across the bottom of the pan. To remove the cake, tilt the pan and gently draw the cake out onto the rack.

Sponge Cake.

1 cup sifted cake flour
¼ teaspoon salt
5 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored
5-egg whites
Grated rind and juice of one-half lemon
1 cup sifted sugar

Sift flour once, measure, add salt and sift together four times. Add lemon rind and juice to beaten egg yolks and beat with rotary egg beater until very thick and light. Beat egg whites with flat wire whisk until stiff enough to hold up in peaks, but not dry. Fold in sugar, a small amount at a time; then egg yolks. Fold in flour, a small amount at a time. Bake in ungreased tube pan in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) 1 hour, or until done. Remove from oven and invert pan on wire cake rack. Remove as directed.

Bookmaking Placed On a Legal Footing Urged by Leaders

Action Is Possible At Special Session

Washington County's Anti-Betting Bill Is Due to Be Signed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 20.—As increasing pressure today was brought to bear from one sectio- of the State on Gov. Harry W. Nice to sign the Washington County anti-bookmaking bill passed by the Legislature, it was learned here that if the Governor did sign the measure, and it appeared that he is constrained to do so from a political rather than from a moral standpoint, that some of his advisers are urging that bookmaking on horse racing be made legal throughout Maryland.

The Governor, it was leraned, may favor introduction at the special session of the Legislature next year a bill repealing the State-wide law prohibiting bookmaking, and providing for licensing bookmakers.

In the study of the situation in Washington County, it was estimated that a license system such as proposed in a bill introduced in the Legislature last session by Senator Ernest W. Miller, of that county, would have returned between $40,000 and $50,000 annually. Under the Miller bill main bookmaking establishments would have paid $2,500 annually and branches $1,000, with - per cent take of all bets.

Under the plan suggested to the Governor, bookmaking establishments would be licensed and regulated the same as liquor places.

The Governor has been informed that a number of bookmaking places are operating secretly in Maryland outside the three counties where they are legalized. In Baltimore, Cumberland and other smaller Maryland cities they pay no licenses, nor are they regulated. The principal objection contained in resolutions and telegrams which have been pouring in to the office of the Governor for weeks from Washington County, stressed that bookmakers there accepted bets as low as 50 cents from children; that many who bet can not afford it, and that even some relief funds find their way into bookmaking places.

Telegrams from organizations and individuals flooded the Governor's office today, urging him to sign the Washington County bill. From the Washington County Ministerial Association came a telegram which stated that it represented 53 churches with 30,000 members who wanted the bill signed. The Washington County Grange also wired asking him to sign the bill, and scores of individual telegrams were received. Last week the Governor received a resolution from the Washington County grand jury stating that gambling of all kinds was rampant there and that bookmaking was the real root of the evil.

Those who forecast the introduction of legislation at the special session next year to license bookmaking say they expect its passage with votes to spare in both houses.

Virginia Judgeship Blocked in House

By the Associated Press.

An objection by Representative McFarlane (Democrat), of Texas, blocked House passage yesterday of a bill by Representative Montague (Democrat), Virginia, to give the Eastern District of Virginia an additional judge.

McFarlane said he thought no more judges should be granted until a survey has been made looking to redistribution of Federal court work.

Tribute Is Paid Justice Digges By La Plata Bar

Special Dispatch to The Post.

La Plata, Md., May 20.—Memorial service for the late W. Mitchell Digges, chief judge of the Circuit Court, was held in the courtroom here today by representatives of the bar associations of Prince Georges, Charles, and St. Mary's Counties.

The memorial minutes were prepared by a committee headed by John Mudd, attorney. Other members were Edward J. Edelen, State's Attorney of Charles County, and Joseph A. Wilmer. These three spoke as well as the three present judges, Chief Judge Walter Mitchell and Associate Justices Joseph C. Mattingly and William M. Loker.

The Prince Georges County bar was represented by former Judge T. Va. Clagett and M. Hampton Magruder. A. Kingsley Love represented St. Mary's County. A large crowd, including members of the family of the deceased jurist, were in the courtroom. Later court was adjourned out of respect to his memory. Judge Digges died on October 15, 1934, as he was concluding his twelfth year on the Circuit Court bench.

Members of the bar pointed out that Judge Digges, until his death, looked on the new high school, the recent building of which was the climax of one of his ambitions, as a memorial to the more than 12 children who were killed when the old building was razed by a tornado.

Mr. Mudd read the committee's resolution honoring Judge Digges. He followed this with a sketch of the late judge's life and character.

This was followed by remarks from the various attorneys who were associated with the judge during a great part of his lifetime.

They told of his endearment in the hearts of southern Maryland residents and traced his life from birth, February 17, 1877, at Hydromont, near La Plata, through his education at Charlotte Hall Military Academy and the University of Maryland Law School in Baltimore.

A.F.L. Chief Urges Labor Push Fight

Maryland Group Told by Green to Insist on Child Labor Ratification.

Federation's Part in Successful Legislation Reviewed by Coleman.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., May 20.—Banking heavily upon pending and proposed legislation, the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federation of Labor had before it today numerous resolutions designed to carry out its program. They will be brought upon the floor of the annual convention tomorrow for discussion.

Unable to attend because of pressure in Washington, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, sent the convention a telegram urging support of the social security, 30-hour week, labor disputes and extension of NRA measures before Congress.

He urged the Maryland delegates to insist on State ratification of the child labor amendment and to oppose the competition of convict labor.

Joseph P. McCurdy, federation president, declared in his annual report the anti-injunction bill passed by the recent General Assembly "was the most important legislation in the federation's history."

More Compensation Changes.

Organized labor also won an outstanding victory in the fight for amendments to the workmen's compensation act and further changes will be sought, McCurdy reported.

The federation's part in supporting or opposing legislation in Congress affecting labor was reviewed in the report of Frank J. Coleman, federation secretary, Washington.

Presented by McCurdy as a "friend of labor," Gov. Harry W. Nice told the convention his tenure is "going to be an administration close to the people." He said nine times out of ten he has been able to co-operate with the federation in legislative proposals because he had found their demands reasonable.

"I have a four-year term and I've served them in four months," Nice said. "I don't want to be Governor again. I wouldn't accept the nomination if it were given me."

Age Pensions Cited.

He declared the old-age pensions act, indorsed by the federation, was the high-light of his administration's accomplishment.

Greetings were sent the federation by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Unemployment League of Maryland and the Socialist Party of Maryland.

Arthur E. Hungerford, State director of NRA, and Senator Harry T. Phoebus, Somerset County, will be the speakers tomorrow.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

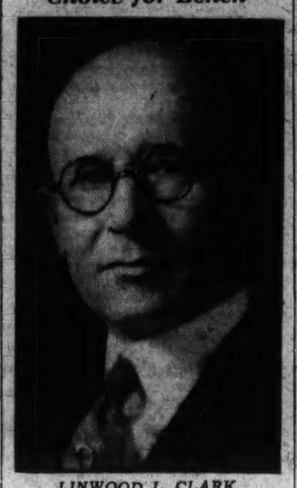
Armstrong here on charges of driving while intoxicated and reckless driving, as a result of a collision with a motor car driven by T. A. Gullis was not injured, but his stepson, Stephen Cina, suffered lacerations. James Kelly, who, Andrews said, was driving his car was badly cut about the face and head.

Choice for Bench



LINWOOD L. CLARK.

Clark Named Anne Arundel Circuit Judge

Governor Nice Selects Man of Own Party to Fill Green's Term.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 20.—Gov. Harry W. Nice today announced his intention of appointing Linwood L. Clark as judge of the Anne Arundel County Circuit Court, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Judge Nicholas H. Green.

Clark, a former Republican Representative, from the Third Congressional District, lives at Eastport, near Annapolis. His son, Ensign Charles H. Clark, U. S. N., played tackle on the Naval Academy's 1933 team.

In announcing his decision the Governor said that while he will not use his authority to identify politics with the judiciary, "all things being equal, I shall certainly, in the majority of cases, make appointments from within my own party." He said that "only blind partisanship, self-interest, journalistic unfairness, or thwarted ambition can be made a basis of criticism of this appointment."

State Senator Ridgley P. Melvin of Anne Arundel County and Eugene P. Childs of South River, both Democrats, had been indorsed for the appointment, Melvin having the backing of the county bar association. Childs was defeated by Judge Green in a primary last fall.

In the election in November Clark and Judge Green were the contesting candidates for the seat, as associate judge of the Fifth Circuit. The vote was Green, 18,348; Clark, 15,393.

Anne Arundel, Carroll and Howard are the three counties of the circuit.

Luckless Man Sues One Who Saved Him

$100,000 Damages Asked for Double Accident.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., May 20.—A series of misfortunes which befell Calvin A. Lum in 1931 were echoed here today with the opening of the $100,000 suit of Lum Versus D. Newton Henson.

According to testimony, Lum was digging a cesspool on a lumber company's grounds in Hagerstown when a collapse of earth and stone imprisoned him. The man he is now suing rushed to his rescue with a crane and timbers.

Freed from beneath a boulder which weighed more than a ton, Lum was placed on a truck owned by Henson, it was asserted, and the truck hurried toward hospital. But en route it crashed into an automobile, an occupant of which was killed. Lum said he was further shaken up and his injuries aggravated by the collision. He appeared in court wearing a leather and steel brace about his neck and head. The suit was moved to Circuit Court here from Washington County, and is being heard by Judge David A. Robb.

Hall Submits Plan to Lure More Travel

Proposes Virginia Tour Bureau in A. A. A. Office at D. C.

50% Gain Foreseen in Trade Now Valued at $70,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Westmoreland State Park, Va., May 20.—Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the Virginia Conservation and Development Commission, today said Virginia's annual tourist business is equal to the more than $70,000,000 industrial pay roll in the State and announced he will recommend to the commission this week a plan by which he "hopes to increase it 50 per cent."

His statement was made as Gov. Peery, members of the commission, high officials of the National Park Service and a score of guests reached Westmoreland State Park—the second of the State's park chain of six to be visited by the group, which yesterday started an inspection trip around Virginia.

Mr. Hall's plan calls for establishment of a Virginia bureau in the national headquarters of the American Automobile Association at Washington.

Estimates Cost at $300.

If the commission approves his recommendation, Mr. Hall said, Virginia will be the first State ever to enjoy such consideration by the AAA. He said that the bureau would be placed in the lobby of the AAA headquarters and would benefit by contact facilities. He estimated its entire cost would not be more than $300 per month.

"I believe Washington with all its conventions, school delegations, natural tourist trade and proximity to Virginia with all its tourist attractions, is the logical place for such a bureau," Mr. Hall stated.

The park inspection party came here today after an early start from the Seashore State Park, and immediately went into the 1,260-acre Westmoreland Park, located between Wakefield, famous because of the Washingtons, and Stratford, birthplace of Robert E. Lee.

Pitt Portrait Dedicated.

The climax to the northern neck visit on the State-wide tour was the dedication this afternoon at Montross Courthouse of a restored portrait of William Pitt, Earl of Chatham.

The Fredericksburg High School band played before the unveiling ceremony, in which Bishop Frederick Goodwin; Blake T. Newton, superintendent of Westmoreland schools; Senator R. O. Norris, jr., of Lively; George Mason; Supervisor Bush Wilkins; David Rosen, an artist, and Morgan Marshall, Baltimore art gallery administrator; and Nancy Byrd Turner, poetess, participated with Gov. Peery and Mr. Hall.

Build Up Needed, He Says.

Reviewing their impressions of the Seashore Park at Cape Henry, most of the party agreed with Mr. Hall when he said that the park probably will need greater "build up" than any of the six in the State. "People everywhere have been educated to think of State and National Parks as located on top of a mountain," Mr. Hall explained.

Visiting the Seashore State Park near here yesterday, a launch carrying the Governor and his party, suffered engine failure on Broad Bay and had to be towed in.

Later, following directions from National Park service officers, the party truged through the park to emerge a half mile down a fire trail from the point where automobiles had been left. Before finding the cars several members of the party said they were "lost."

Judge Green's Estate To Widow, Daughters

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 20.—Although the bulk of the estate of Judge Nicholas H. Green was left in trust for his widow, Mrs. Frances Burns Green, and a daughter, Miss Mary Clare Green, several specific bequests are outlined in the will made public today. Value of the estate has not been made known.

Aside from the trust fund, Judge Green left $5,000 to each of his daughters, Mrs. Eleanor T. G. Brown, Mrs. Sarah G. B. Baker and Miss Clare Green, and a like amount to Miss Myrtle Sturm, who was his secretary for a number of years. The latter also was left certain office furnishings.

Baltimore Judge Won't Let Men 'Go to Hades' With Claw Device

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 20.—Asserting he granted "full weight" to arguments that "it is every man's privilege * * * to go to hades by his own route," Chief Judge Samuel K. Dennis, in a special charge to the grand jury, today launched a new campaign against Baltimore "claw" machines.

Judge Dennis told the jury the city is "well-night overrun" with claw machines and other gambling devices, and declared it was the duty of all law-enforcement agencies to enforce anti-gambling laws.

He said he previously had not felt such a charge would be appropriate in view of the fact a bill licensing claw machines was before the Governor for approval.

"Since that bar is now removed," he said, "it is my duty * * * that I call your attention at once to a topic which is painful and merits your sober consideration.

"It is perfectly obvious the city is well-nigh overrun with claw machines and other gambling or near-gambling devices and aids to gambling. It is easy to locate such machines and secure evidence of violations of the law through their use."

"The 'numbers game' and bookmaking on horse races flourish," he continued, but asserted it was more difficult to secure proof of these latter violations of the law.

Law-Wise Convict Loses 24th Appeal

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Md., May 20.—Louis Berman, whose correspondence school law course has carried him through 23 hearings on his plea for a writ of habeas corpus to escape a life term in the penitentiary, lost his twenty-fourth hearing here today.

Berman was brought here by a deputy warden for the penitentiary to appear before Judge T. Sangston Insley to present the case he has presented before judges in almost every county in the State.

Judge Insley denied Berman's plea, asserting he had no jurisdiction. Berman was sentenced for murder in 1928. He charges his case was not properly tried in the Baltimore courts.

Virginia A. F. L. Resolutions Hit Glass and Byrd

Roosevelt Social Program Praised at 'Serene' Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, Va., May 20.—The Virginia Federation of Labor today heard the president of the neighboring West Virginia federation inferentially criticize the Old Dominion's senior Senator, Carter Glass, in the same breath with which he praised Rush Holt, Senator-elect in the Panhandle State.

Moving serenely through the first session of its fortieth annual convention, the 170 delegates cleaned up the morning program in a hurry and then sailed for a pleasure trip in Hampton Roads, took a motor car tour in the afternoon and held a banquet tonight prior to the administration caucus.

Delegates applauded when John B. Easton, president of the West Virginia federation, after praising the labor record of Senator-elect Holt, said "seldom will Rush Holt be voting alongside Carter Glass when a labor measure is up for consideration."

Byrd Attacked.

It was the only mention of any member of Virginia's delegation in Congress, but several resolutions were in circulation sharply criticizing Virginia's Senators—Carter Glass and Harry Byrd—particularly Byrd. One of the resolutions, prepared by H. K. Smith, of Richmond, vice president of the Typographical Union there, asserted that on seven labor measures Byrd had voted unfavorably to labor on five and had not voted on the other two.

Tomorrow they'll elect officers, take action on resolutions, decide where to meet next year and then go home—by noon, convention leaders predicted. Petersburg and Covington were making strong bids for the 1936 convention.

Miss Edith Christenson, State organizer for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, said the union movement was progressing in Staunton despite opposition of the chamber of commerce.

Security Plans Praised.

Resolutions in support of President Roosevelt's social security program were among those in the hands of the resolutions committee which will meet at 9 a. m. tomorrow, an hour in advance of the final session of the convention.

Leaders of the federation said the resolutions praised specifically the Wagner bill, old-age pensions and unemployment insurance and urged enactment of corresponding State legislation by the General Assembly.

Asserting that passage of the Wagner bill would revolutionize the labor movement in Virginia, Secretary-Treasurer Shave said off the convention floor it would increase the federation's membership from 22,000 to 175,000. He said the ranks of industrial workers in Virginia number 210,000.

3-Day Parley Opens On Virginia Highways

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., May 20.—Representatives of the counties and towns included in the Bristol and Salem, Va., highway districts met at Wytheville, Va., today for a three-day parley preliminary to the legislative commission conference, which will assemble in Wytheville on May 27 to receive recommendations in connection with its study of the State's roads system.

The preliminary meeting, according to H. E. Jones, chairman of the local chamber of commerce roads committee, will seek to arrive at some definite policy to be followed at the hearing before the commission. The Bristol and Salem districts comprise the counties of Bland, Buchanan, Dickenson, Grayson, Lee, Russell, Scott, Tazewell, Washington, Wise, Wythe, Smyth, Bedford, Botetourt, Carroll, Craig, Floyd, Franklin, Giles, Henry, Montgomery, Patrick, Pulaski and Roanoke, and the cities of Roanoke, Bristol, Radford and Martinsville.

Road Program For Maryland Waits Parley

Highway and Planning Commissions to Map Action Next Week.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, May 20.—Denying reports that Maryland's portion of the Federal roads funds had been definitely alloted or any program yet discussed, State road commission officials said today that a meeting would be held within the next week between members of that commission and the State planning commission, when a program will be prepared and submitted to Federal road authorities at Washington.

In the meantime survey crews were dispatched by order of Chairman Homer L. Tabler, of the commission, to all sections of Maryland to obtain data on main arteries as well as lateral roads and when this information is in the hands of the commission, it was said, the two commissions will decide on the most urgent projects.

It was learned that one of the projects which road officials will likely include in this program is that of the National Highway, or Route 40, between Baltimore and the western part of the State. This highway, one of the principal feeders of the State from the West, had little work done upon it since concrete sides were laid years ago. Sub-zero weather during the last two winters has played havoc with sections of this highway, and what repairs were made were only of temporary character.

The conference will decide to what extent this highway will be repaired or rebuilt in sections.

Star Witness In Bus Theft Shot to Death

Nearby Pistol Indicates Driver Was Slain With Own Gun.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., May 20. — Investigators today sought the slayer of a bus driver whose body was found early this morning soon after he had told a detective a masked man had threatened his life if he testified against a colored man arrested for stealing his bus.

Discovery of the driver's pistol beside his body indicated that his assailant had taken the weapon from him and opened fire. A passing motorist found the dead man just off a highway at 2:30 a. m.

William J. Hall, the driver, operated a Norfolk Southern bus which was stolen Thursday night and later recovered. Jesse Neal was arrested Sunday and police said he confessed to stealing the bus.

Hall told Detective C. B. Briggs, the latter said, at midnight that he had been stopped twice last night by a masked man who warned him he would be killed if he testified against Neal. Briggs quoted Hall as telling the masked man he did not see who took his machine.

Virginia Expects Huge Roads Fund

Richmond Counts on U. S. Sending $14,400,000.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 20.—Highway Commissioner Henry Shirley today estimated that Virginia will receive approximately $14,400,000 for highway work from both works relief sources and the regular Federal-aid allotments.

He said that he had been advised from Washington that the regular Federal-aid bill carrying an appropriation of $125,000,000 had passed both branches of Congress and was now awaiting the President's signature. Virginia's share is estimated at $2,400,000, which will be in addition to the works relief funds.

The highway commissioner said that the State's road finances appear better today than they have for some months past. He pointed out that Virginia virtually has gotten rid of $9,000,000 in obligations in recent years.

Men will have an opportunity this year to compete in the annual flower show to be given June 5 and 6 by the Hagerstown (Md.) Garden Club, of which Mrs. Thomas Hardinge is president. A section has been set aside for exhibits arranged entirely by men and will be one of the features of the show. Judges for the show this year will be drawn from out of town. Six members of the Hagerstown Garden Club will attend the annual spring meeting of the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland to be held at Hope House, home of Mrs. W. J. Starr, Easton, Md., May 28.

Today the Swan Pond Women's Club of Martinsburg, W. Va., will meet, having as hostess Mrs. T. C. Meyers. The program will be under leadership of Mrs. R. G. Coffman. Mrs. A. S. Putnam was hostess yesterday to members of the Ijamsville Women's Club of Frederick, Md. Antiques were displayed and plants and clippings for the gardens of members were exchanged.

Motion Picture Critics; Numbering 352, Make Up Their Minds About the Screen

Varying Views Disclosed by a National Ballot

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is Mr. Jack Alicoate, formerly a member of the staff of this estimable family journal, who informs me in a special release for this morning that, according to his Film Daily poll of some 352 of the Nation's leading motion picture critics—and this is the agency, you will recall, that conducts the annual choice of the "ten best pictures of the year," by these same critics, who, for purposes of film selection, seem to run 100 or so stronger than they do in this "Critics' Forum"—motion pictures have made more progress in the last year than in any similar period in the history of the cinema.

Only a few critics believed that the Legion of Decency campaign had anything to do with the improvement of the general ethical and moral worth of the film product that found its way to the screen this past twelvemonth. Many of them, on the other hand, declared in strong terms that the film industry should have fought for its right to free expression instead of bending backward to meet the wishes and, at times, the impudent demands of the few crusaders who sought to impose their opinions on the mass public.

Answers to ten specific questions in the blank form sent the critics of the Nation resulted in a consensus that ran somewhat as follows, according to Mr. Alicoate's accurate summarization of the replies which found their way to his desk—and what an ample desk that must be!

The Voice of the Critics.

1. Legion of Decency campaign did not impair the entertainment value of films. Movie attendance since the drive began has increased, but due chiefly to general business conditions.

2. Critics are divided on the question of whether theaters are entitled to higher admission prices than the present depression low levels. Consensus is that an increase at this time would be difficult to effect even though many movies are worth more money.

3. Best way to improve press material sent out by film companies is by having it prepared by trained newspapermen.

4. Short subjects are very poorly exploited by theaters, though it is almost unanimously believed the public would prefer one feature and a variety of shorts, instead of two features, if exhibitors helped to put the people in that frame of mind by publicizing meritorious shorts.

5. Classification of theaters, according to adult, family, juvenile, sophisticated, artistic and educational type of films, is believed a good thing, but considered impracticable at present, except in a few large cities.

6. Musical films are clicking in almost 90 per cent of the communities and historical films in about 80 per cent. The critics point out, of course, that the quality of picture has a lot to do with it.

7. Movies are holding public interest more consistently than the radio, in the opinion of 92 per cent of the critics.

8. Widespread use of color would not help films to any great degree, the majority of critics hold. They see color merely as an incidental trimming, with its value depending on how judiciously it is used.

9. Centering of practically all production in Hollywood is believed advisable by a greater portion of the critics. They believe that consideration of climate and conceptration of facilities and talent in the interests of quick availability, overshadow any advantages of having production scattered around the country.

10. In designating their favorite players, the critics preferred in order Charles Laughton, Claudette Colbert, George Arliss, Clark Gable, Leslie Howard, Norma Shearer, Greta Garbo, Will Rogers, Shirley Temple, Helen Hayes.

We Object!

These allegedly final conclusions on Mr. Alicoate's part do not entirely reflect the attitude of this department in regard to many of the vital issues involved.

The items with which we have a particular and, perhaps, purely a personal fuss are represented by the majority answers to questions Nos. 1, 2, 4 and 8.

We believe the Legion of Decency drive had a great deal to do with improving the ethical and moral aspects of film productions.

As one who was viciously attacked—at the instigation of acutely competitive interests—as a violent opponent of the legion drive, I beg to take this opportunity to say that films have been pursuing a course of cumulatively more dependable caliber, treatment and content since the voice of the campaign made itself heard in Hollywood. I say this in no spirit of humble retraction of things I wrote a year ago, but as a firm conviction based upon a close and especially interested observation of a crusade against which I never launched an attack, but concerning which I did attempt to point out a few defects of conception, purpose and execution.

That is the right of any fair commentator upon the fashioning of public entertainment and of public opinion.

It Not Critic's Business.

As the matter of increase in admission charges, my reply to the questionnaire of the Mr. Alicoate and his Film Daily was that this is a matter that is none of the motion picture critic's business.

Insofar as Washington is concerned, it seems to me that both exhibitors and public are doing pretty well.

I am not at all sure, however, that a film play that is worth only 25 cents from opening of the theater to 1 p. m. is worth two or three times that amount from 1 p. m. on. If a bill is worth, 50, 60 or 75 cents at one hour of the day, it is worth the same amount at another.

If this discrepancy in prices is due to an omission of the stage show that is another matter. But the practice is followed in many houses in which no stage show is presented at any hour of the day or night. So what?

Short Subjects and Color.

As to item No. 4, I see nothing at which to carp in the manner in which short subjects are exploited in the Capital. Some of them, when quality has warranted, have been "played" over the program's ostensible major feature.

When it comes to color, I entertain the possibly fantastic notion that any element of approach to the senses that increases a film's appeal is to be welcomed. In the old silent days, pictures were a source of entertainment that relied solely on the visual sense for appreciation. With the coming of sound and dialogue, back in August, 1926, something of the field of the radio was invaded by adding to the sense of sight the sense of hearing to the full appreciation of screen diversion. Color, while still visual in apprehension, is, nevertheless, an additional aid to pictorial realism. As has been remarked here many times before, life is not lived exclusively in tones of black, white and gray. The grass is green, the sky is blue, the flowers are multicolored and the birds and the beasts betray pigmentations that are as varied as they are beautiful. Something of this actuality should be brought to the cinema. The sooner it gets here, the better, is what I always say.

What is there "incidental" about the coloring with which a Divine Creator decorated his world and the people who live therein?

Cabbages, Kings, Sealing Wax.

Among suggestions from the critics and passed on to the industry for improvement of the movies were: Elimination of big dancing numbers in musical films, casting of fewer players with British accents in American stories, less typing of stars, fewer freak camera shots, not so much Pollyanna handling of sex themes, less imitation of successful pictures, more accuracy in adapting books and plays, greater opportunities and attention for character and bit players who are popular with the public, fewer and shorter advertising trailers and getting closer to reality in portraying various phases of life.

With the possible exception of the erudite conclusions relative to one of our pet abominations—the advertising trailers that clutter up all the screens in the land—most of this is so vaguely indicative of a diverse and purely personal point of view as to elevate itself above the plane of defensible comment. Or maybe I mean to sink itself below any such serious consideration.

At any rate, Mr. Alicoate's annual field day for the critics is an interesting, if not to stimulating, interlude in the lives of those who go down to their seats on slips and attempt to record their reactions for the possible benefit of others who have to lay their money on the line.

Announcement comes to this desk that "The Unfinished Symphony," the film play based on the life of Franz Schubert, next at the Belasco, will inaugurate its run on Wednesday, instead of Thursday, as originally announced. This means that the run on the Belasco screen of "Little Friend," starring that prodigious child actress, "Nova Pilbeam"—if that is what she is—will end tomorrow night.

I have been severely upbraided—which is not a new experience—for having implied that Miss Pilbeam may not be as young as she seems. I had in mind Mary Pickford, at the moment of typing this possible affront to an actress who is entitled to credit for remarkable ability, whatever her age, because, as you will recall, Miss Pickford, also, found it within her easy grasp to do equal justice to characters ranging anywhere from 14 to 40. Maybe Miss Pilbeam, no matter what her years, is the Mary Pickford, instead of the Shirley Temple, of England. However it may turn out, she is a grand little actress.

"The Unfinished Symphony," by the way, is being previewed by the local dramatic desks today at 2. More of this later, everything being propitious, as it so seldom is!

Master Frank Braden, that ardent advocate of everything that savors of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey, it is who slips me the tip that this looks like the greatest engagement the circus has had in Washington in years on end.

The big tent show—the biggest of them all—has done record-breaking business everywhere it has played this year. These spots, so far, are not too numerous—New York, Boston, Brooklyn and now here. But they show which way the wind blows. And the wind is blowing, make no mistake about that!

It is interesting that a zoological experiment is being made today out at the show grounds. Vice President and General Manager Sam W. Gumpertz, of the circus, is reintroducing "Babe," the elephant from the Ringling-Barnum & Bailey herd presented to the Washington Zoo last year, to her old associates under the white canvas of the menagerie tent. It will be noted with intense interest just what Babe thinks of getting back onto the tan bark after a year of lolling about in luxury down in Rock Creek Park.

The ceremonies today will be attended also by Dr. Mann, who presides over the Capital's Zoo with a compassionate and complete sympathy with the peculiar problems of his charges.

Babe is an elephant that has been around for quite a time now. When she was donated to the local zoo last year by Sam Gumpertz, Headkeeper Blackburn, of the Zoo, declared that she had been with the Ringling circus for 31 years and was no debutante when she made her first appearance under canvas.

The best estimate, at the moment, is that Babe is around 90 years old, closely approaching a round century of being an active aid to show business.

More power to the old girl! And here is an extra peanut, sweetheart, just as a reward for superior service!

One of the ace attractions of the circus this year is Col. Timothy John Fitzpatrick McCoy, who heads the wild West show that comprises one of the major exhibits of the "after show," or "concert," with which every orthodox tent show concludes its program. Col. Tim, as you need not be reminded, is one of the outstanding heroes of celluloid melodrama of the so-called "Old West." He has played in a long list of thrilling pictures, but probably more important is the fact that his screen reputation has multiplied by three or four or five the "take" of the concert following the major tent show. The colonel has with him a fine lot of riders, 20 Sioux and Blackfoot Indians and a wild West show that is probably the best that has come along since the late Buffalo Bill was gathered to his fathers.

Benefit Is Success.

The National Vaudeville Artists' benefit performance at the Earle Theater Saturday night, augmented by the additional contributions of all the theaters in the District today, to the extent of 10 per cent of their gross receipts, bids fair to triple the net profits of Daniel Frohman's recent actors' fund benefit.

It is estimated, and conservatively so, that the two-days' activity on behalf of the N. V. A., will net something like $3,000 in the Washington metropolitan district for the fund designed for charitable purposes of a most worthy nature. This is approximately three times what the venerable Mr. Frohman was able to amass for his Actors' Fund of America, Inc.

That, it seems, is the way things go nowadays, with no personal preference one way or the other, but with a considerable penetration into the public point of view—if any.

Among those who came from out of town to add to the distinction of the bill presented to an audience that was not as large as it should have been in the Earle Saturday midnight, were Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, one of the swellest of the contemporary dance teams, who will be seen on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater almost before you know it. Sam and Patti are brother and sister-in-law, reading from left to right, of Goldie Ahearn, who does the arranging for the interesting bills of fisticuffing put on by that veteran of the match, Joe Turner. For any dope, please call my confrere, Bill McCormick, over on the other side of the room. Unless, that is, you want to know that Sammy and Patti are ne plus ultra dancers—in which case call me! Or don't call me and it still will be all right!

Echoes-of-the-Past Note.

Keyboard and Composer Go to World!

The combination of this thoughtful young man, these hands and this keyboard has given America a considerable percentage of her popular music. It is, of course, Irving Berlin—"Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Everybody's Doin' It." "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," "Remember," "Always," "Russian Lullaby,' etc., etc., etc.—who is bending over the instrument upon which he turned out the melodies for RKO-Radio's new musical, "Top Hat," costarring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

"BURLESK STARLETS." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 13 scenes, with Billy Foster, Leonard Kramer, Ray Parsons, Charles Goldie, Billy Fields, Bubbles Yvonne, Marie Allely, Mimi Reed, Phyliss Vaughn, Diana Johnson, Lucille Wayne, Shirley Mac and Miss Toya. Book by Gus Platy; dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Wattley.

"Burlesk Starlets" is a show which is excellent in every department, with personnel that is strictly A-1 throughout.

To be sure, no show this season can be recalled so replete with splendid artists as this one—here, as a matter of fact, is a production with no stars at all, for the good and sufficient reason that every performer in it is virtually a star in his, or her, own right.

If you do not believe that, just note that italicized paragraph above—Foster, Kramer, Fields, Bubbles, Goldie, Parsons, Ming Toya, et alia. Those names need no "notice."

A Celestial Newcomer.

Of all those listed, Ming Toya is, perhaps, the least known for, it is said, she is here making her first appearance on any burlesque stage. Only appearing once, this Chinese revelatory artiste makes a charming addition to the roster of burlesque's fascinating sirens.

The week's comics — Foster & Kramer, Charlie Goldie, Billy Fields—work in top form, and the display artistes — Phyliss Vaughn, Diana Thompson, Marie Allely, La Toya — leave nothing to interfere with one's appreciation of the female form divine. Mimi Reed has several excellently executed acrobatic dances, and Lucille Wayne and Shirley Mac contribute more of their "sister" routines. The week's aggregation of "line girls" can sing, as well as dance and be easy on the eyes.

GLORIA SWANSON wishes to deny those rumors and seems to believe they started because she was wearing a cape. However, in Miss Swanson's own words, as she talked about it to Rob Wagner of Script: "If I were 'that way' I'd be the first to admit it. I've furnished the chatter writers with two true 'happy event' stories. But this one isn't. And under the circumstances it takes on the color of scandal." Anyway, she's frank . . . Editor Urges Press Aid Race Relations

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 20.—William Shands Meacham, editor of the Danville Register, today urged the press to become a more constructive force in race relations by becoming increasingly intolerant of the tolerance of State administrations toward ineffective legislation peculiarly affected with public interest.

Insurance laws, the editor asserted, are very indulgent and permit operations of some industrial insurance companies to collect premiums in arrears and give receipts which very clearly state that the insured is not protected until the premiums due are paid in full and a satisfactory physical examination passed.

Mr. Meacham was the principal speaker on today's program of the sixteenth annual State-wide conference of the Virginia commission on interracial co-operation.

Marshall attempted to sign Stan Kostka, Minnesota's All-American full back of 1934, but Kostka's dad gave him a $10,000 job in his factory . . . in Boston's Fenway Park where Marshall's team plays its home games, he maintains during the football season the same elaborate bar in the press room that Yawkey sets up for the baseball correspondents . . . The Carnera-Louis bout with no title at stake figures to outdraw the Braddock-Baer match by at least 100 grand . . . Baer and Carnera drew only $260,000 last summer and the Garden is rueing the day it signed Braddock and Baer . . . on the same card that saw Baer beat Carnera, Braddock was floored twice by Corn Griffin, Primo's sparring partner . . . if, perchance, Louis stops Carnera, Soldiers Field in Chicago, with its 130,000 seats, will be the only site capable of accomodating the Baer-Louis bout for the title in September . . . that is, of course, if Braddock does not upset Baer on June 13 . . . and you can still get 6 to 1 that he will not.

Walter Johnson, quoted in Boston yesterday morning as saying that Lefty Grove is through as a pitcher, chose a poor time for such a statement . . . later in the day, Grove held Johnson's Indians to seven hits . . . Clark Griffith yesterday received no encouragement from Rogers Hornsby when he broached a deal for a St. Louis pitcher . . . Anything can happen in baseball . . . when Mule Shirley, Chattanooga manager, returned from a four-day bender on the road with the team during which he was suspended, Chattanooga fans turned out en masse to welcome him . . . and demanded that Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga club, reinstate him. Cubs Shut Out Boston As Double Plays Aid

Chicago, May 20 (AP).—Four double plays and three hits apiece by Infielders Bill Jurges and Phil Cavarretta led the Cubs to a 5-to-0 triumpn over the Boston Braves in the opening game of the series today.

Backed by excellent fielding, Bill Lee pitched a six-hit shutout, allowing only two Braves to get to second base and none past.

5-Run Fifth Turns Back Cellarites

Only Five Hits Allowed by Washington Hurler; Van Atta Routed.

By Shirley L. Povich.

THE Nats took advantage of the presence of the St. Louis Browns at Griffith Stadium yesterday to win a ball game and terminate their two-game losing streak.

The Browns, be it known, are an eighth-place ball club when at full strength, and yesterday they were crippled by the absence of four regulars nursing injuries and illness, so Washington's 8-2 victory was not exactly in the nature of a surprise.

But the five-hit ball game that Irving Hadley pitched against his former colleagues was the least bit startling inasmuch as it was only the second time in six starts that he was able to go the route. Hadley's effort was the sixth occasion which has seen a Washington pitcher negotiate the full nine innings this season.

Hadley Is Master.

The Browns scored a run off Hadley before they made a hit off him, but he was their complete master. Going into the eighth inning, he owned a two-hit game.

Washington won the ball game back in the fifth inning, when Russel Van Atta, former Yankee left-hander who was making his debut for the Browns, lost his control, his effectiveness and his 1-0 lead in a series of events that saw the Nats score 5 runs on 3 hits and 3 walks. The Nats drew 10 walks from Van Atta and his big-hearted successors before the ball game was over.

Bucky Harris' revamped batting order, which found Joe Kuhel leading off, Buddy Myer in the clean-up role and Fred Schulte in right field, was making no progress rapidly against Van Atta until the fifth inning, despite their four hits up to that point.

Browns Take Lead.

The Browns had taken their 1-0 lead in the fourth inning after Hadley had retired the first nine hitters in order. Cecil Travis was the culprit. He threw Clift's grounder away for a two-base error, and Clift eventually scored from third when Hadley pitched a fourth ball to Burnett that got away from Catcher Cliff Bolton for an error.

There was no intimation that Van Atta was beginning to fade when Kuhel led off the fifth with a sharp single to center. The former Yankee southpaw retired Bluege and Manush in order and his 1-to-0 lead was apparently safe. Then he became wilder than a pie-eyed Indian. He walked Myer and Schulte to fill the bases and then forced the tying run home by passing Travis.

Powell to the Rescue.

At this point Jake Powell provided the pivotal blow of the ball game. After breaking his bat on a foul tip, Powell picked up a new instrument and smashed a single into left field that scored Myer and Schulte. Travis came home and Powell galloped to third base when Pepper permitted the ball to roll through his legs and hit the fence. Bolton dumped a single into right that scored Powell with the fifth run of the inning.

Through it all, Hornsby tolerated the presence of Van Atta, but he removed him for a pinch hitter in the seventh and then made a poor choice of relief pitchers.

The Browns own a sizeable casualty list that is handicapping the team no little. Pitcher Fay Thomas and Catcher Rollie Hemsley remained in Philadelphia yesterday, Thomas with an attack of laryngitis and Hemsley with a fever. Outfielder Sammy West and Second Baseman Oscar Melillo were confined to the team's hostelry here, West with an attack of grippe and Melillo with a badly bruised heel.

Heil Hadley!

Yanks Subdue Chisox, Lose Argument

Dickey and Allen Ousted as Broaca Conquers Chicago, 7-2.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 20.—The Yankees lost an argument but won a ragged ball game today at the expense of the league-leading Chicago White Sox.

The New Yorkers made good use of their ten hits off Southpaw Carl Fischer, making his first start for the Sox, and easily captured the first game of the series, 7 to 2.

Johnny Broaca, the bespectacled alumnus of Yale, throttled the burly-looking visitors in the pinches, leaving 13 men stranded on the bases, and also was the cause of the day's big debate.

The Yankees protested with such violence when Umpire Bill McGowan called a balk on Broaca, in the seventh, that Catcher Bill Dickey was ejected for using abusive language and Pitcher Johnny Allen was banished from the bench for banging the front of the dugout with a bat.

The argument, led by Manager Joe McCarthy and Capt. Lou Gehrig, lasted nearly ten minutes, but had no bearing on the ultimate outcome. The Sox pushed over one run, after Broaca's balk advanced two runners to second and third, but other wise proved impotent with men on base. They filled the bases twice, in the second and sixth, with only one out.

Hagerstown to Open Race Meeting Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 20.—Horse racing returns to the mountain section tomorrow with the opening of the ten-day meeting of the Hagerstown Fair Association at the local track.

Rumors of a horse shortage due to the attempted "strike" of owners were dispelled by the entries announced by Racing Secretary Edward J. Brenan. Limit fields were named for each of the seven events and six races had long "also eligible" lists. Only eight starters are allowed to a race at this course. A check showed that upward of 200 horses are on the grounds. Several stables are expected to ship in tomorrow.

The first "daily double" on a half-mile track in Maryland will be operated here. As usual, the "double" will be on the first and third races and will be conducted as it was at Bowie and Pimlico. The money will go into a separate pool, not affected by the winning mutuel price on either race involved. The object is to pick the winners of the two races.

A general increase in racing interest in the section and better times seem to point to a record opening day crowd providing good weather prevails. Andrew Coffman, president of the association, and Harold F. Bester, vice president, are pleased with the caliber of horses available and expect the meeting to be a financial success.

Many Maryland favorites are included in the entries for tomorrow. Small Change, Scotty Don, Aella, Morocen, Black Dreams, Pencader, Light Breeze, Post Brigade, Miss Catalan, Sisko and others popular with the half-mile betters are expected to face the barrier.

The day's feature race is the Harry E. Bester Memorial, named in honor of the man who revived racing at this track. The test, fourth on the program, is over the 5-furlong course and has drawn a list of 14 3-year-old and upward horses. Two distance events are scheduled, the sixth and seventh races, at a mile and a sixteenth. The card opens with the Blue Ridge, a sprint of 5 furlongs.

Post time is 2 p. m. The purses will be $300.

Indians Down Sox To Gain on Chicago

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 20.—With Oral Hildebrand pitching effective ball to register his second victory of the season, the Cleveland Indians defeated the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 1, in the series' opener today. The victory, coupled with the defeat of Chicago, reduced the White Sox's margin over the Indians to 1½ games.

The Sox got to Hildebrand for nine blows, but the Cleveland right-hander scattered them over as many innings and but for Rick Ferrell's homer in the sixth would have scored a shutout. Lefty Grove pitched good enough ball to win most games. He held the Indians to four hits and one earned run in the eight innings he was on the mound.

Chisox a Wonder Team, Says Dykes—'Everyone Wondering'

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, May 20.—A big "X" still marks the spot where Manager Jimmy Dykes was placed in Chicago at the opening of the current baseball season. But Jimmy isn't on the spot any more. That "wonder team," the White Sox, rescued him and blasted plans to have Rogers Hornsby named his successor.

That's why Brawny Jim, with his sparse hair, sat so contentedly on his little dressing room stool before today's game with the Yankees and merrily blew smoke rings at Al Simmons' prominent proboscis. He was soaring in the stratosphere of humor. Instead of being former manager of a tail-end club, he was "Miracle Man" Dykes of a league-leading outfit.

Jimmy waved his big cigar triumphantly at the circle of reporters. "Yes, sir, boys," he beamed, "I'll tell you why the White Sox are at the top. Because we're a wonder team. Everybody's wondering why we're up there."

And the pathetic little stools in front of the lockers creaked in anguish as Jimmy and Simmons, the big Polish pellet pounder, swayed with laughter. The rest of the team was out on the diamond practicing, but Center Fielder Simmons had remained behind as Jimmy's bodyguard, helper-along, yes-man and critic.

"All kidding aside, fellows," Jimmy said. "That's no joke about the White Sox being a wonder team. We've jumped from last place to the top. We're getting fine hitting, pitching and fielding. And the grandest team spirit I ever saw. That's a rare combination."

Shute, Rouse Top Chicago Qualifiers

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 20.—Denny Shute, winner of the 1933 British Open championship, and John P. (Sonny) Rouse shot their ways over two Medinah Country Club courses today in 148 strokes to lead home the 14 Chicago district qualifiers for the National Open golf championship tournament.

Rouse, a Chicago youngster, brightened his morning round with a hole-in-one on the 125-yard ninth on the No. 1 course, but a number of other standouts, including Chick Evans, Russell Stonehouse, of Indianapolis; Don Armstrong, Aurora, Ill., amateur star, and the veteran professionals, Harry Hampton and Jock Hutchison, were unable to make the grade.

Tommy Armour, Medinah's professional, forced to qualify for the first time in his long career, shot 77-76—153 to meet the occasion handily.

The qualifiers:

Denny Shute, Chicago	75-73—148
J. P. Rouse, Chicago	73-75—148
Alex Slupple, Chicago	74-76—150
Frank Walsh, Chicago	76-74—150

Workman Rides Plat Eye, Derby Failure, to Win at Belmont

Rosemont 2d, 2 Lengths In Rear

Greentree Colt Draws Away in Stretch; Pays 9 to 5.

By the Associated Press.

BELMONT PARK, N. Y., May 20. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Plat Eye, making his first start since his poor Kentucky Derby effort, raced to his best form in leading five others of his age to the wire in the one-mile Campfire Purse here today. Beautifully handled by Sonny Workman in the absence of the ailing Silvio Coucci, the dark bay son of Chicle was a handy victor by two lengths over the Fox-Catcher Farm's Rosemont. The Geneseo Stable's Whizzaway was a fast-going third, a half length behind. Morpluck, Whopper and St. Bernard brought up the rear.

All but Morpluck and Whissaway are eligible for Saturday's renewal of the Withers, historic $5,000 added, one-mile test for 3-year-olds.

Equal 9-5 Choices.

Plat Eye and Rosemont carried equal weight of 118 pounds. They wound up equal choices at 9 to 5 for the eight-furlong trip, which was completed in 1:38. Rosemont, winner of an allowances affair at Havre de Grace in his only start as a 3-year-old, was a tired horse at the end. He might have been fourth in a few more strides for Whizzaway and Morpluck, both slow to begin, were running over him in the final strides. Morpluck ran as if he had finally found something like the form he displayed last fall.

Workman sent Plat Eye right to the front and kept him on the inside, where the Greentree colt likes to run. Plat Eye put St. Bernard away in the first five furlongs. Rosemont and Whopper rushed up to virtually even terms with the ultimate winner midway of the final bend but Workman Cooly refused to get ruffled and was rewarded when his mount drew away in the final straightaway.

ADVOCATE JUNIOR, well handled, was away fast, moved up on the outside, leaving the back stretch, responded gamely to brisk handling and was up in the concluding strides. KOWTOW, prominently placed from the outset, assumed a slight lead in the stretch fought it out courageously and just failed to last. BROMIDE hustled to the front soon after the start, was unable to draw clear but fought it out gamely to the close. ROSE HAZEN closed ground in the last 3 furlongs. JOE JAY had early speed, though unable to keep up with the leaders after leaving the back stretch. MATCH never could enter into serious contention. STARRY NIGHT bore out badly at the stretch turn.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 2:55. Off at 2:56. Winner, Mrs. E. McGride's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PAY RACK, $14.30, $8.80, $6.80; QUEEN HELEN, $5.20, $3.70; TWENTY KARAT, 13.00.

PAY RACK displayed good speed from the start, shook off LOVE LOST, withstood a determined bid from MAIDWELL and hard ridden, held QUEEN HELEN safe. Latter, restrained early, moved up gradually and closed with good energy. TWENTY KARAT moved up in the run through the back stretch, dropped back rounding the turn and closed gamely in the last furlong. Watson lost his whip nearing the sixteenth pole. MAIDWELL moved up in threatening fashion, approaching the stretch but was unable to improve her position in the drive. LOVE LOST, quick to begin, displayed early speed but weakened in the last three-sixteenths. The others were never prominent.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out. Place driving. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:28½. Winner, F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRED ALMY, $10.00, $4.40, $3.80; STAROGAN, $3.70, 3.00; CHIEF A., $4.20.

FRED ALMY, away fast, lacked speed to hold his position, was permitted to settle into his stride, moved around on the outside in the last five-sixteenths and closed stoutly through the stretch run. STAROGAN was a prominent factor from the start, was much used in disposing of ALWINTOUR and had nothing left with which to stall off the winner. CHIEF A moved up gradually, found clear sailing on the inside through the stretch and finished with a rush. ALWINTOUR was hard ridden throughout and faltered in the closing three-sixteenths. IMMUNE was unable to reach the leaders. The others were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out. Place driving. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 4:01. Winner, L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZULU LAD, $6.30, $3.40, $2.90; LOVITO, $5.60, $3.80; STEPBROTHER, $6.30.

ZULU LAD, under slight restraint for the first five-sixteenths, while working his way up gradually, came to the outside in the stretch and catching the leader tiring, was going away at the finish. LOVITO followed the early pace, established by JESSIE D. M. and held on well to the close. STEPBROTHER worked his way up steadily and finished with a rush on the inside through the final eighth. JESSIE D. M. went to the front at once, drew clear but stopped through the stretch. GIFTED LADY, slow to get going, closed stoutly in the last five-sixteenths. BELOW COST displayed good speed for the first three furlongs. QUEEN VIC was far back all the way.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. The Derby Claiming Purse. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 4:30½. Winner, Mrs. W. W. Vaughn's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRILLFALON, $14.20, $6.40, $4.10; SUN ERIN, $3.60, $2.80; CROWDED HOURS, $4.60.

BRILLFALON was up with the pace throughout, assumed lead nearing the stretch and hard ridden all the last three-sixteenths outlasted SUN ERIN at the finish. SUN ERIN, under slight restraint for the first six furlongs, moved up stoutly thereafter and closed well. CROWDED HOURS, taken back of the pace, swung to the outside at the last turn and closed gamely. GUNWALE forced the pace and weakened in the last quarter mile. GRANDPAS BOY, placed under punishment approaching the far turn, moved up steadily, loomed up threatening at the stretch turn, but dropped back steadily thereafter. JACK CHEVIGNY displayed good speed for the first three-quarters.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:30 sharp. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAXEN, $17.40, $7.20, $3.90; ANNARITA, $6.50, $3.50; POPO, $2.80.

FLAXEN raced along under steadying restraint until rounding from the back stretch, went to the front with a rush, but had to be hard ridden at the end and just lasted. ANNARITA, well placed from the start, took command between calls and came away at the end. POPO, away slowly, moved into contention after going a half mile, moved up gamely, but was unable to reach the two leaders in the drive. SAINT KITTS displayed good speed in pacemaking, but faltered after going five furlongs. He pulled up lame. TOP HIGH was never prominent. BRASS MONKEY and SMEAR were outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:29. Off at 5:30. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TARTAN BETSY, $9.70, $5.00, $2.80; FOREIGN LADY, $5.10, $2.60; MATADOS, $2.30.

TARTAN BETSY followed in close pursuit of the pace, found clear sailing on the inside and, closing in determined fashion, was along inside the last sixteenth to wear down FOREIGN LADY, under reserve for the first 5 furlongs, went to the front midway the far turn and, though fighting it courageously, was unable to stave off the winner. MATADOS took command in the run to the first turn, opened a good lead and, under snug restraint until the last five-sixteenths, barely lasted to save third. WINGED FLIGHT outrun for the first 6 furlongs, closed some ground in the last three-sixteenths. WEEDIDIT made up some ground.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 1 furlong. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 6:00. Off at 6:00½. Winner, B. N. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PASS, $3.90, 2.70, 2.10; BUNGALOW, $3.70, $2.30; OLAMAY, $2.30.

PASS went to the front in the opening furlong, drew away into a long lead and was never threatened, holding away to the end. BUNGALOW moved up gradually after going the first half-mile, closed gamely but just lasted, to hold th the place safe from OLAMAY. The latter trailed until the quarter-mile, was brought to the outside in the stretch and closed with a rush and was going strongly at the finish. GAY PARTY raced well up, but weakened in the last quarter-mile. MATHIAS had brief early speed. CAPPOQUIN was never a serious threat.

Brillfalon, 7-1, Rockingham Winner

Wagner Puts Up Fine Ride; Sun Erin Is Second by a Head

By the Associated Press.

ROCKINGHAM PARK, Salem, N. H., May 20.—Mrs. W. W. Vaughn's 3-year-old chestnut colt, Brillfalon, upset the well-laid plans of those who had installed Sun Erin a favorite to win the feature race this afternoon, and inched his way to victory after a savage battle with Sun Erin.

The Vaughn colt, a 7-to-1 outsider in the betting marts, ran a sound, consistent race, with Jockey J. Wagner showing excellent judgment of pace.

He allowed Jack Chevigny to set the early pace; moved to the front on the far turn; gave up the lead to Sun Erin for a brief moment on the back stretch, and then took it again, never to relinquish it.

Wins by a Head.

The finish was a heart-breaker for those who had bet on the favorite. The horses legged it down the stretch, with Brillfalon always showing in front and Sun Erin stoutly trying to close the meagres gap. Brillfalon won by a head, and Sun Erin was only a half length ahead of Crowded Hours, who stormed down the home stretch with a terrific burst of speed after having been boxed the entire distance.

The winner paid $14.20, $6.40 and $4.10.

Dr. Hayes' 71 Is Leader in Practice

250 to Tee Off Opening Day; First Pair Will Start at 7 A. M.

AL TREDER, Manor Club's golf professional, is a man of few words, but today and tomorrow in the qualifying round of the invitation tournament Silent Al is going to get plenty of talking exercise—calling out the names of 450 golfers.

At least 250 of these divot-diggers are due to answer the 18-hole medal roll call today.

At 7 a. m. Treder will bark out: "Mr. Bergfeld and Mr. Heath on the tee." They will be the first to fire off.

Five-Minute Intervals.

At five-minute intervals the record first-day field will tee off. It will be 4:05 p. m. before the last twosome tees off.

Miller B. Stevinson, of Columbia, winner of the medal at Chevy Chase last week, and Albert Mackenzie, former Middle Atlantic champion, are paired at 12:35. Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring, winner of the Woodmont medal playoff, is to tee off at 11 a. m. with George F. Miller. M. Parker Nolan, finalist in the 1933 Manor invitation, and Craig McKee are paired at 3 p. m.

Most of the big shots, including defending champion Harry Pitt, will play tomorrow.

Dr. Hayes Cards 71.

A goodly number took advantage of practice rounds yesterday. A 71 by Dr. William F. Hayes, unattached, was the lowest score reported.

During the course of the workouts a caddy, Peter Smith, was unceremoniously baptised in the famous pond of the 125-yard eleventh hole. It all came about when M. Fitzgerald, a golf scribe, and the caddy in question lost their grips on the golf club as Smith tried to fish out the ball knocked into the pond by Luther Steward, sr., who was playing with Fitzgerald and Luther Steward, jr.

The caddy was doused and Fitzgerald barely averted tumbling in himself. The caddy was unable to tote the bags the rest of the day. An early report said that Fitzgerald hit his ball into the pond, threw his bags in and then threw in the caddy—but this was denied by the threesome.

Beach carded a 70 to win the pro sweepstakes in the morning. Only two other professionals posted scores.

Schoolboy Golf Draws Local Youngsters

BILLY DETTWEILER, 17-year-old Georgetown Prep School golf star, who hopes to make a "grand slam" or five-ply wallop in prep tournaments this season, will go after his second victory of the season in the District Schoolboy golf championship which opens Friday afternoon at Indian Spring.

Dettweiler will attempt to add The Washington Past Trophy to his fast growing collection of golfing laurels, his most recent being the Maryland Schoolboy crown which he won this past Sunday at Hillendale, Baltimore. Successful in the District Schoolboy, Dettweiler will attempt to retain his Maryland State junior championship June 17 at Rolling road.

Then will come the District junior at Kenwood June 20-21-22. The following week he will embark for Greenwich, Conn., for the National Interscholastic.

Dettweiler is expecting serious opposition from Bobby Brownell, District junior champion, and Chubby Oliveri, both of Roosevelt; 14-year-old Buddy Sharkey, of Gonzaga; Billy Shea, of Western; Bobby Troutman, Georgetown Prep teammate, and Jack Barr, of Friends.

Following the 18-hole medal round at Indian Spring, the boys will invade Kenwood Saturday for first and second round matches. With Congressional as the scene of the semifinals and finals, Dettweiler and Shea will find things to their liking, since it is their home course.

With The Post donating the individual trophy and a replica, the District Scholastic Association is awarding a special team trophy.

Auerbach Files June 9 Boat Race Entry

S. MORTIMER AUERBACH, of Atlantic City, N. J., world's record holder in the 125 and 225 motor boat classes, has sent in his entry with Emancipator IV for the Shrine Regatta to be held here on June 9.

Auerbach last year established a world mark at Havre de Grace in the mile trials and in the 5-mile competitive event in the 125 class and also in the President's Cup Regatta here in the 5-mile competitive event.

The Atlantic City sportsman is sending his new Emancipator IV against the cream of the 225 boats in the Nation here on June 9 and probably will take a shot at the measured mile mark set up by Arthur L. Bobrick, member of the racing commission of the American Power Boat Association.

Course Laid Out.

This course was laid out last Friday and announcement probably will be made to the yachtsmen entered that a special time trial mile event for all classes will be run in conjunction with the Shrine event.

Auerbach's new craft was built at the Ventnor Boat Works, at Ventnor, N. J. The motor is an Auerbach-Ford V-8 type. The Absecon Island Yacht Club member will be assisted by Anthony H. Pezzillo, rated as one of the outstanding mechanics in the country, who has been with Auerbach on many of his record assaults.

Griffith will give the children baseball tickets and theater tickets will be distributed to the "Sons" in the Father and Son combinations. Sidney Lust, local theater operator, is chairman of the committee in charge of the dinner.

7-Year Holiday From Golf Delayed His Peak, Wood Says

By Dave Herman.

CRAIG WOOD, the tall, blond and handsome Deal, N. J., professional, yesterday bemoaned the fact that golf took a holiday for seven years in his strange case.

Between giving helpful hints to a steady stream of Washington duffers and good players alike, and crashing some of his booming wood and iron shots into the specially constructed golf net at the Hecht Co. store, the golfing Adonis took time to point out the biggest mistake he ever made in his life.

"You speak of death taking a holiday—why golf took it with me," Wood declared. "After caddying from 7 until 13 years of age I suddenly decided to quit the game and go after an education. Do anything but play golf.

Showed Improvement.

"Seven years later at the age of 20 I got a job as a bookkeeper down Kentucky way. I felt the old golfing urge, and in the afternoon I'd go out and play golf. I was so encouraged over the improvement I made in my game that when a professional job was offered me that year I quickly accepted it."

Wood explained that as a caddy in New York he scored consistently in the low eighties, and, consequently the swing and fundamentals were so indelibly impressed in his mind that it was only a matter of a few months of vigorous practicing before he was hitting his shots remarkably well.

"I believe that my athletic training at Clarkson Tech, where I played hockey and baseball, also helped to condition me for my golf career," Wood said. "But I only went there two years. I didn't like engineering."

"The point is this," said the big time pro. "I am just seven years late in reaching my peak. I am 33 now. I should have been at the top at 25 or 26. Had I kept on playing golf instead of quitting at 13, I probably would have—and I don't say this to display any conceit—won six or seven national championships."

"Dogged by hard luck in playoffs, were you?" the New Jersey star and leading money winner of the 1933 season was asked.

"Wouldn't exactly say that, but its been sorta tough on me in three big events," he said.

"Denny Shute licked me in the British Open playoff two years ago. My old pal, Paul Runyan, whom I brought up from the milk farm of Arkansas to be my assistant some years ago, took me on the thirty-seventh hole of the National P. G. A. finals last year, and Sarazen beat me in the Augusta playoff recently."

If you want another hard luck story, let Craig tell you how he played the wrong ball in the National Open at Merion last year and was disqualified. He might have won were it not for this second round misfortune, he will tell you.

Wood said he was off the fairway only once in his playoff with Sarazen, but that his putting caused his downfall.

Proud as a baby with a new toy is Wood of such stars as Runyan, Vic Ghezzi, Dick Metz and Clarence Clark. Why? Because Craig was their professional boss one time or another. Wood requests that you watch this 23-year-old Ghezzi, one of the winter aces.

Oakmont Tough.

And about Oakmont and the National Open Wood says:

"You can bet a dollar, son, that 298 will be the winning total. I haven't played Oakmont since '27, but I'll be there for plenty of practice. There'll be no par-breaking scores."

Along the line of the amateurs the Deal pro poured out words of praise for 16-year-old Bobby Jacobson, his protege — the kid who knocked off Johnny Goodman in the second round of the National Amateur at Brookline last year.

He said:

And just about that time a fellow answering to the name of Bob Peables clasped Wood's hand.

"I'm the pro who beat you out for the Kentucky championship in your first big tournament 12 years ago," Peables said.

"Oh, yes." Wood said. "How well I remember."

Parker Cook Wins D. C. Shoot Crown

Cook's victory makes him eligible to compete in the grand national at Vandalia, Ohio, in August. The Vandalia shoot is known as the champion of champions race.

C. C. Fawsett won the all-around championship as announced in The Post Sunday morning, but the real title for the championship of the District is the champion at singles, as the all-around championship is simply a cumulative accounting and is not considered as the District championship.

Western Takes Last Shot at Title Today

Diamond Loss to Central Will Eliminate Boys Across the Creek.

Still in the race for the championship, Western High's Red Sox will embark Eastward about 2 o'clock this afternoon, bound for Eastern Stadium, where they will find Central High's twice beaten former favorites waiting for a chance to shove the Georgetowners out of the title chase.

Providing the Red Sox complete the long cross-town trek by 3:30 p. m. the contest will commence at that hour with Ted Kinsman probably tossing 'em up for Coach Cliff Moore's Westerners and Lefty Rowles southpawing 'em over for Coach Jack Ray's Mount Pleasanters.

With a victory for Western meaning a second-place tie with Roosevelt, the game assumes serious proportions so far as the Thirty-fifth street students are concerned. The chances are, however, that out of sheer deviltry, etc., Central will ruin the title hopes of their adversaries. For one thing, Central is distinctly due for a series victory. In the second place, Western's pitching has not been any too impressive and neither has its fielding.

Central seems too good a team to lose three series games in a row. The team which battered Lefty Joe Sullivan, Eastern ace, for a dozen hits can hardly be expected to fold up before the hurling of young Kinsman. Dan Cleary, a better relief pitcher than a starter, however, gives the Westerners some double-barreled mound resistance.

In addition, Western has shown itself a hitting club which, in the Roosevelt game, at least, more than offset some ragged play afield. Another demonstration of the clouting which toppled the Ruff Riders would bring the fourth upset of the series providing Kinsman and Cleary can keep the Central attack shackled.

W.-L. High Tumbles Eastern Nine, 3-1

The two-hit pitching of Orlando Birch, Washington-Lee High's three-sport star, was too much for Eastern High, interhigh champions, yesterday and the Little Generals came through to win a pitchers' battle, 3 to 1, at Ballston, Va. Ed Tucker started on the mound for Eastern, giving up 4 hits in six innings at the end of which he turned the twirling over to Lefty Joe Sullivan who finished the game allowing but one safety.

Garrett Parkmén Beat Roosevelt

A 3-run splurge in the second inning gave Georgetown Prep a 3-to-0 upset victory over Roosevelt High, second-place team in the interhigh series, yesterday at Garrett Park. It was a pitchers' battle throughout between DeSales Powell, the Prep's converted golfer, and Hank Blundon, up-and-coming Roosevelt moundsman, with Powell getting the better of the duel.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

THIS column title is a bad one this morning, we are afraid, unless the wind changes and a heap of sun shines down. The weather man's advice is to stay home!

A vile nor'easter spoiled the day for most chaps who tried the upper bay on Monday. It was even blowing pretty hard Sunday and, although a few hardheads and trout were caught, many sportsmen gave up in disgust.

We are afraid this is what happened to the President, too! On Saturday afternoon, we were advised from competent authority, he landed a few fish, but on Sunday he didn't even wet a line.

The wind played havoc with the crowds that made the long trek down to Oregon Inlet. Most of them were utterly "skunked." Friday the wind down there was southeast and that isn't too bad.

Hamas to See Brown-Everett

Fighter Here Monday at Battle

Will Make First Public Appearance Since Schmeling Bout.

Barring an act of Providence, riot, civil commotion or flood, Steve Hamas, one of the pack of contenders baying at the heels of heavyweight champion Max Baer, will be at Griffith Stadium Monday night to watch Buck Everett and Natie Brown indulge in 10 rounds of fisticuffing. Steve's interest in the bout is not a casual one, he expects to battle the winner of Monday's bout here sometime later in the summer.

Through his trainer-confidante Ali Thoma, Hamas agreed to meet the winner of a return match between the local heavies who staged such a thriller here at the Auditorium. He asked for a return match between the heavyweights partly in order that he and Thoma might scout them in action and partly because many felt that Everett had not demonstrated a marked superiority over Brown, despite the unanimous decision which he took in the Auditorium bout.

Hamas at present is in hiding out in the deepest seclusion in upper New York State. He will be making his first public appearance since his unfortunate loss to Max Schmeling when he steps into the limelight at Griffith Stadium. Thoma and Hamas expect to leave New York some time Sunday and they will continue the role of recluse Steve has played upon their arrival here by retiring to the home of a close friend until fight time Monday night.

A shot at Hamas is not the only prize that is being dangled in front of the winner of Monday night's bout. Brown has been signed to fight in the semifinal to the Baer-Braddock title bout in June—if he beats Everett. Everett himself is under consideration for a bout on the Baer-Braddock card. It is entirely possible that if the Griffith Stadium match between Brown and Everett proves as bitterly contested as their Auditorium match, they will be tossed together in New York in support of the championship bout.

Bob Tow, the Alexandria Adonis, who, incidentally, is the only local heavyweight to hold a decision over Everett, will meet Norman Barnett, a member of Hamas' stable, in a ten-round cofeature to the Brown-Everett bout. Pete Bevans, local welterweight, yesterday was signed to do six rounds of preliminary battling against Roy Manley. It will be their third meeting. The other two were close.

Another six and an opening four-rounder will complete the card.

Zaharias Draws Fans Because He's Bouncy

By Bill McCormick.

ONLY THE tip of Promoter Joe Turner's head was visible as we entered the offices of the old old maestro of maul. The rest of the maestro's person, including: two (2) very kindly bespectacled eyes; one (1) classical nose; two (2) chicken croquet ears; one (1) slightly bloated paunch, two (2) slightly bandied legs, and one (1) puzzled expression, were hidden behind an imposing ledger labeled "Accounts" over which the promoter was poring.

"This here now George Zaharias feller is the greatest box office attraction we've had in Washington for two years," opined the wrestling impresario, ringing up "no sale" on the office cash register and recording the transaction in the account ledger. "This here feller what's his name? Oh yes, Zaharias, may be the most unpopular wrestler to show here and the fans may boo him to the echo, but my stas . . . stis . . . my sticksticksticks . . ."

"My figures show," amended Turner, casting a reproving glance at the minion and flipping a daub of ink on his still flapping ear. "My figures show that the fans here alluz comes back to watch Zaharias work. That's the reason I've booked him with Emil Dusek on my regular show at the Auditorium Thursday night, the fans alluz comes back for him—I hope."

"This here George Whatshisname's appeal is due to his startling prowess as an upsetter," striking the figures 101,472,984 on an adding machine just to see what the figures 101,472,984 looked like. "Time and time again he has startled wrestling fans with surprising victories—an 11-minute defeat of Ray Steele here and beating Jim Browning out on the Pacific Coast are numbered among his outstanding exploits. Yes, sir, the crowd loves to see an upset."

"I think it's the way he grunts that intrigues the customers," we ventured.

"Naw," interrupted another cauliflowered minion, "they like to see him bounce. Zaharias is about the best bouncer in the business—and the fans like to see a rassler bounce when he's tossed around."

"Please, sir," he tremoloed, "I would very much like to purchase two very choice $1.65 tickets for the wrestling match Thursday night. I wanna see this guy Zaharias again. Gee whiz, how I like to see him tear them other wrestlers limb to limb. That's the stuff I like—blood and thunder."

The meek-looking wrestling addict was handed his two tickets and departed without ever suspecting he had solved one of life's little mysteries.

We departed from the Turner offices as Joe was tearing to pieces the ledger account book. On the way out we picked up a card telling us that in two supporting bouts Thursday night Al Bisignano would meet Pat McKay and Jack Donovan would snarl at Scotty Dawkins—both finish matches.

American Pros May Not Play In Britain

Air Trip Necessary to Catch Boat After U.S. Open; Four Affected.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Unless special arrangements are made so they can fly from Pittsburgh to New York immediately after the United States Open Golf championship to make boat connections, Gene Sarazen and other professional stars will abandon plans to go abroad for the British Open tournament next month at Muirfield, Scotland.

"The only boat we can make which will get us there in time for sufficient practice leaves at midnight, June 8, the final day of the American Open," said Sarazen today. "It would mean a quick hop from Oakmont and so far we have not been able to arrange airplane connections. The next boat, leaving five days later, would not allow us enough time to shake off our sea legs before the British Open starts June 24."

Sarazen said he understood Tommy Armour, MacDonald Smith and Henry Picard also hoped to go abroad if they could catch the earlier boat.

"Then, too, a tie at Oakmont might upset our plans," Sarazen suggested. "It's going to be a tough tournament. The course is just as difficult as it's advertised to be. My best practice round out there recently was a 73. Four rounds like that would be enough to win, with plenty to spare, in my opinion. But I doubt if I or anyone else can do it."

Little Is Pressed To Win on Links

quered J. O'Donnell Higgins, of Montreal, 5 and 3, and Webster-Bullock eliminated H. Eatough, of Burnley, 4 and 2.

So out of order was Little's game in general that the youth who shot the first 23 holes at Prestwick in eight under par last year to win the championship, required 79 strokes today over this 6,666-yard, par 69 layout. Parker carded an 81. Conditions were not exactly ideal for low scoring. The course was drenched by a heavy overnight downpour and special high jinks were supplemented by a cold, racing wind.

If, for instance, Little had been playing against his compatriot, Topping, he would have bowed out of the tournament three down. Parker, despite the fact he used a monstrous wooden putter, which failed to function, drove as far as Little most of the way and much straighter. The American managed to turn the first nine one up because of a lucky break when his ball caromed off Parker's pellet on the ninth green into the hole.

String of Fours.

Parker settled down and shot a string of fours on the back nine that had Little and the gallery of more than 1,000 hanging on the ropes; particularly on the eighteenth green where the Californian somewhat uncertainly knocked in an 18-inch putt for a halve in fours and the match.

Little considered himself extremely lucky to get by Parker and the disastrous first day. The consensus tonight was that the champion will have to get his house in order tomorrow before he takes on the dangerous Eric Martin Smith, winner of the title in 1931. He isn't driving with his usual magic touch. No less than three of his tee shots wandered off the fairways into trouble, and twice, on the holes bordering the railroad tracks, he used an iron off the tee to guarantee straight shots.

Here are some other pairings for tomorrow: Stranahan vs. D. Coates, Fairhaven; Tailer vs. A. Jamieson, jr., Pollok; Forsman vs. I. Lyle, Royal St. Georges; Knowles vs. M. Parkinson, of the home club; Webster-Bullock vs. Bruce Thompson, Liverpool.

TACTICS of those fighting for and against the so-called merit system are deplored by John Arthur Shaw, veterans' leader and former president of the American Federation of Government Employes.

BAKER.

"It seems to me," Mr. Shaw said last night, "that many of those in the battle are fighting in accordance with their own selfish ambitions instead of the principle involved."

He emphasized that he favors the merit system for many reasons, among them:

Because it is the only system under which competent persons may be assured of keeping their jobs with the changing of administrations; because unless the workers are sure of this, the morale and efficiency of the service as a whole suffers; because under the present laws, therefore, few are likely to make the Government service their career, and because merit alone should count in the matter of selection and retention.

Mr. Shaw believes that such attacks on the merit system as the married persons clause and "political preference" only end in protecting incompetents.

However, Mr. Shaw also holds "that persons who obtain positions in the Government under laws prevailing at the time of their appointments should, if competent, have complete protection when any change is made in the system. Thus, if it were decided that the R. F. C. should become a Government bureau rather than a corporation, I do not believe that the personnel of that outfit should, after from one to four years of experience, be expected to pass an examination in competition with those outside of the service."

Mr. Shaw recommends qualifying examinations in such cases, preferably on the non-competitive basis. He regards it as the height of foolishness to discharge a man who has handled his job satisfactorily for a couple years in order to place on that job a man of unknown ability in that line of work—just because the latter happened to have made a few more points in a competitive examination.

It has been found, according to the expert on Federal personnel matters, that more than 75 per cent of the persons appointed in the agencies not under civil service are appointed for reasons of training and ability and not for political reasons. He cites his experience in three "alphabet" offices.

Civil service and noncivil service employes should stop "sniping" at each other, Mr. Shaw declares, and adds that they should join hands and fight for extension of the civil service through the medium of taking in the "outside" establishments by noncompetitive examinations.

All employes of Agriculture are invited by Lodge No. 116, AFGE, to attend the lodge program of speaking and installation of officers at 8 p. m. today in the South Building auditorium. Honor guests will include Secretary Wallace, Chester C. Davis, Julien N. Friant, John B. Payne, Representative Robert Ramspeck and E. B. West.

Wire Stocks Move Higher; Trading Drops

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 20.—Substantial gains in a few high-priced industrials and some specialties touched up an otherwise rather colorless stock market picture today.

Stock exchange business dropped to only about half that of the last previous full session, with a turnover of 971,570 shares. Taking the list as a whole, gains about balanced losses, and this was true with considerable uniformity throughout the various stock groups.

Communication shares were an exception. A considerable following developed in this division at advancing prices. Radio preferred "B" and Western Union were leaders, and American Telephone, which suffered from late profit-taking, was up more than a point at times. International Telephone was active at fractionally improved levels.

Wall street commentators offered a number of vague explanations of the liking which traders showed for the wire companies. Increased stock market volume has brought a little pick-up in telegraph and telephone business, it was pointed out.

In addition to the communications the bulk of active trading was concentrated in a scattering of issues which included Sperry Corporation, Bridgeport Brass, Columbia Pictures certificates and Fox Film, all at new highs for 1935. Anaconda was a little reactionary on brisk volume.

The figure for last week was 43.4 per cent and compares with 44.6 per cent a month ago and 54.2 per cent a year ago.

Cotton Rallies After Selling

Closing Prices Steady at Net Declines of 1 to 3 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 20.—Early losses of 6 to 8 points in cotton today under liquidation and foreign selling were followed by partial recoveries on trade and commission house buying. Final prices were steady at net declines of 1 to 3 points.

There was sufficient trade price fixing and demand credited to Government agencies to impart a steady undertone after the initial selling orders had been executed.

General rains in the Southwest and reports of floods attracted attention but failed to bring in support. The spot and cotton goods markets reported quiet conditions.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Mon.	Sat.
Advances	286	123
Declines	280	373
Unchanged	171	142
Total issues	737	638

Stocks—High-priced industrials and wire shares were higher, but the gains were offset by losses in other groups. Trading dropped to 971,570 shares.

Bonds—The general list sagged in restricted transactions, which receded to $8,144,000. General Theaters Equipment and the Paramount group showed strength. Government issues were dull.

Curb—Demand for certificate shares of Columbia Pictures carried the stock up 17 points. Otherwise, small gains outnumbered losses. Trading fell off to 188,000 shares.

Grains—For the first time since 1931, corn sold higher than wheat, which toppled to a near low for the season. Scarcity in May deliveries accounted for the corn rise while heavy rains were held responsible for the drop in wheat. May wheat closed at 89½, May corn at 89.

Cotton—Rallied after losses on liquidation and foreign selling. Closes were at net declines of 1 to 3 points. May at 11.98.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 3.25 while refined closed unchanged at 5.25 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet and barely steady. Rio No. 7 closed at 6⅞, while Santos No. 4 sold last at 8¼.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Trading developed irregularity on the stock exchange today due to the dealers holding off in view of the uncertain continental politics. Gilt-edged securities, oil and gold mining shares weakened while industrials and German bonds hardened. Transatlantic issues were easy. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Profit-taking and Wall street irregularity caused prices to decline on the bourse today, most stocks losing part of last week's gains. Toward the end of the session, prices became somewhat firmer. Rentes recovered most of last Friday's losses. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—Dullness developed on the boerse today after an irregular opening. Prices showed a slight recovery from lows of the day.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 20.—Increased buying of real estate for investment and speculation is reported from a number of cities, especially in the East. This is an evident reaction to the wave of fear of currency or credit inflation that followed passage of the Patman bill by Congress and the frank discussion of some of the likely effects of the banking bill of 1935 by bankers appearing before the Senate Committee on banking and currency.

One form that the new phase of development in the real estate field takes is the rise in the reported number of foreclosures by institutional and individual owners of mortgages that are in default. It continues to be the policy of many mortgage lenders, as it was during the earlier period of the depression, to avoid foreclosures as far as possible by permitting mortgagors to delay payment of interest or principal due, and even to reduce the amounts of the payments from the original contract. On the other hand, a number of institutions are changing their policy and are bringing pressure for regular payments with foreclosure as the alternative. The reasoning back of this change in policy is that, with inflationary credit expansion, ownership of property may prove quite profitable, so that creditors are less justified in making concessions in order to maintain their creditor status.

Foreclosures Probably At Record Levels.

Available statistics on foreclosures indicate that they are now proceeding in the neighborhood of a record rate, probably even exceeding the highest depression level, despite the hampering effect of State moratorium laws in several jurisdictions. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports the number of foreclosures monthly for 1,013 communities. These are running at the rate of some 17,000 monthly this year, and it is probable that the number will prove even greater in April and May when data are available.

The increase in the rate of foreclosures, which has been most marked in the case of homes, has been accompanied by a substantial increase in the rate of turnover of realty properties generally. The index of real estate activity prepared by the Home Loan Board stood at 53 per cent of the 1928 level at the end of last year. Reports from various communities point to a sharp rise in this index during the first half of this year.

Real estate is classified with common stocks as a means of protecting investors against the adverse effects of a rise in commodity prices, which would reduce the purchasing power of capital and fixed rates of income. It is also looked upon as an alternative means of benefiting from another period of business prosperity such as that which culminated in 1929, when credit expansion brought about a great increase in the volume of business activity without material change in the price level. In the twenties, while realty values did not soar in the way stock prices did, except in special cases such as the Florida communities, they did advance quite materially.

Favored by Many Over Common Stocks.

Some students of the situation hold, in fact, that if credit inflation should really take hold, or if there should ultimately be a resort to greenback issues, the effects this time may be more notable in the real estate field than in the stock market. One reason for this conclusion is reasoning from the old adage that lightning never strikes twice in the same place.

Another is the higher margin requirements in the stock market as a result of enactment of the securities exchange act. At present, where stocks sell well above their low prices of the last three years, they are subject to a minimum margin requirement of 45 per cent. The Federal Reserve Board, through modification of its Regulation T, is in position to raise this margin requirement higher to any extent desired, even 100 per cent. The Federal Reserve Board also has the authority to require member banks to keep down the amount of their security loans in relation to capital and surplus, under the banking act of 1933. These newer control powers, as well as the restrictions on manipulation and those likely to be imposed on the use of the holding company device, tend to make less likely a repetition of a bull market in stocks comparable to that of 1928 and 1929. Also, increased taxation on corporation, such as that provided in the pending social security bill, will tend to reduce corporate profit margins, and thus further to restrain advances in the stock market.

Lower interest rates on mortgages, on the other hand, may prove an important factor in increasing interest in real estate investment. On the other hand, trends in municipal taxation will bear watching, as any substantial additions to the already heavy burdens imposed on real property in many communities would have a depressing effect on the trend of realty values.

Corn Passes Wheat in Price

First Time Since 1931; Wheat Sells at Low for Season.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 18.—Abnormal scarcity of corn available for delivery on Chicago May contracts resulted today in such corn being quoted at one time higher than May wheat.

Incidentally, May wheat established a new low price record for the season. Heavy rains beneficial to the domestic winter wheat crop, Southwest and West in particular, tended decidedly to increase bearish sentiment as to wheat.

Corn closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to ¾ higher, July 82¼@82⅜, wheat ¾@1 down, July 90@90⅛, oats ⅛@⅜ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 17 cents.

Today was the first occasion since 1931 that any corn future had sold above wheat. With Chicago corn contracts totaling 8,250,000 bushels that must be settled inside of the next ten days, traders who are short of corn are exhibiting a good deal of nervousness over talk of a possible squeeze in prices.

Bearish advices about wheat included word that moisture conditions in much of Canada are the best since 1928, with acreage curtailment thus more than counterbalanced.

Washington 1st In Life Policy Gain for April

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Washington led the Nation in the amount of new life insurance written during April, as compared with a year ago, according to a survey completed yesterday by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau in Hartford, Conn.

In the month the District scored a gain of 35 per cent over the same month of the previous year. The closest runner-up, West Virginia, reported a gain of but 23 per cent, while the national average fell 7 per cent below the 1934 month.

Sales here for the month totaled $5,471,000, with 77 per cent of all the companies operating in the city reporting increases in business. The showing was far better than that in adjacent States, although only one of them showed losses. Virginia, with a gain of 10 per cent, reported aggregate sales of $6,488,000, while West Virginia sold $5,137,000 in policies.

Maryland Gain 6 Per Cent.

Maryland with 6 per cent higher sales placed new policies totaling $7,466,000, while North Carolina figures matched those of a year ago with $6,990,000 worth of new business. South Carolina, the only losing State in the Fifth Federal Reserve District, dropped 14 per cent to a total of $2,743,000.

For the first four months of 1935 the Capital's record far outstripped the Nation, gaining 31 per cent over last year's sales in the same period, as compared with a United States gain of 8 per cent. Individually, Washington was in fourth place for the four months, next to Delaware, Montana and Nevada.

For the past 12 months local sales showed nearly three times the percentage gain that was scored by the United States as a whole. New life sales in the year period were 22 per cent above the previous 12 months, while the Nation recorded a gain of but 8 per cent. Individually, this city was in third place, with Montana and Nevada reporting higher increases.

Railroad Equipment Orders Are Placed

New York, May 20 (AP).—A few sizable orders for various kinds of railroad equipment have recently been placed or are contemplated, according to Railway Age. Included was an order for 7,600 tons of rails placed by the Akron, Canton & Youngstown Railroad.

The publication also reports that the Bangor & Aroostock is about to start negotiations for two new heavy freight locomotives and the New York Transit Commission has approved orders for 25 articulated five-section trains for the Brooklyn Manhattan Transit Co.

Associated Gas Output Up 2.5%.

For the week ended May 11 Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 53,107,435 units, which is an increase of 2.5 per cent above the comparable week of last year. Gross output, including sales of other utilities, amounted to 59,867,953 units.

Lead Raised to 4 Cents, 4th Advance in Week

New York, May 20 (AP).—The St. Joseph Lead Co., it was announced today, has advanced the price of lead to 4 cents a pound, New York, and 3.80 cents a pound, St. Louis. This represents an increase of $1 a ton and is the fourth rise of that amount since the beginning of last week. The advance was followed by the American Smelting & Refining Co., which named 3.95 cents.

Trade Lift Seen In Advertising

Retail Lineage Gains 6.5 Per Cent Over Last Year, Classified, 9.5.

Chicago, May 20.—Newspaper advertising lineage in April showed another substantial gain compared with the volume for April, 1934, according to an analysis by Advertising Age of advertising in 81 leading cities. The gain amounted to 4.8 per cent; based on a total of 163,951,000 lines for April, 1935, and 156,362,000 for April, 1934.

Retail lineage, an accurate indicator of store sales, was the principal factor in the gain, rolling up 92,951,000 lines for the month, an increase of 5,706,000 lines, or 6.5 per cent, compared with the corresponding month of last year.

Classified lineage, reflecting increased activity in many lines of business and employment, likewise showed an important increase, totaling 25,161,000 lines. This was a gain of 2,186,000 lines compared with April, 1934, figures, or 9.5 per cent.

General advertising did a little more than hold its own, showing a gain of 288,000 lines, slightly less than 1 per cent. The total was 29,740,000 lines, compared with 29,452,000 for the corresponding period of 1934.

Automotive lineage continued well below the peaks of last year, showing a loss of 1,034,000 lines, with a total lineage of 10,591,000. This was a decrease of 8.9 per cent, ascribed largely to disturbed production schedules due to labor troubles.

Financial advertising showed another small gain, going up to 2,932,000 lines for the month, an increase of 2.7 per cent compared with the lineage of 2,856,000 for April, 1934.

Magazine advertising registered a gain of approximately 3 per cent in May, Advertising Age reports.

Bonds Recede; Federals Dull; Theaters Firm

General List Inclined to Stay in Restricted Volume of Trading.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 20.—Few important price changes were recorded among corporate bonds today with most of the list inclined to sag under moderate offerings. United States Governments were lifeless but held fairly steady under the spur of Home Loan 4s.

Indications that traders and investors were holding the sidelines until the Patman inflationary bonus bill and other political developments in Washington come to a head were seen in the extremely small turnover which approximated only $8,144,000, par value, against $11,943,000 last Friday.

A few firm spots among amusement bonds and several other individual issues in various groups stood out prominently against the drab background of the main body of loans traded in. Two issues of General Theater Equipment securities were in heavy demand and gained more than a point and various loans of the Paramount-Public group likewise enjoyed a broad demand.

Larger Harvests Threat to Prices

New York, May 19.—Commodity prices have now reached a crucial point in the upward movement which has been in progress since February, 1933, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. An important factor in the rise which has already taken place has been the curtailment of agricultural production. New crops are now in the making. If growing conditions from now on should point to a larger harvest in 1935 than in 1934, the prices of farm products would decline.

Such a decline would tend to be reflected in the prices of manufactured goods. Not only would the cost of raw materials be lower, but lower food prices would pave the way for a reduction in the cost of labor.

If there is a larger harvest this year with a consequent recession in the general price level, the result will be an expansion of general purchasing power. At the present time prices are so high, relative to the national income, that the general business recovery movement is practically blocked.

A Proper Line of Play.

The skill of dummy play daily becomes greater as the game of Contract Bridge grows in popularity. Meager hands are made to fulfill contracts which even last year would have seemed impossible.

Here is an example:

North, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

North	East	South	West
1◇	Dbl.	Pass	1♡
Dbl.(1)	3♡(2)	3♠(3)	4♡
4♠	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—It is quite possible from North's point of view that East-West can go game in hearts. North has a pattern that holds hope of finding a cheap game-saving overbid.

2—This jump assist was not made under any misapprehension that the hand warrants it. Obviously the hand is worth only a single raise in confirmation of the suit. But East was out for big stakes. He was confident that if his side proceeded briskly to four hearts, the non-vulnerable opponents would overbid to save game. An immediate leap to four hearts by him might shut out a spade bid by South. His bid of three hearts was nicely calculated to incite rather than deter such a bid.

3—Rising to the bait. The rest of the bidding was a foregone conclusion.

The Play.

West opened the four of hearts. East won with the Ace and found the best defense by continuing a heart and forcing the dummy. It seems impossible for the North-South cards to escape the loss of a club and two spades in addition to the heart already lost. But the declarer chagrined his opponents by making contract. No defense could beat his line of play.

Declarer decided that East must hold the King and the Jack or ten of spades. If East held all three missing honors, contract was hopeless. Declarer therefore planned his play on the assumption that West held just one of the two lower spade honors.

Dummy led a small diamond to give South entry through the Queen. South then led a small trump and dummy played the nine over West's seven. East winning with the Jack. East forced out the last small trump in dummy with another heart lead. This play was later castigated as suicidal because it deprived declarer of a chance to guess wrong in the subsequent play of the trump suit. But declarer asserted with reason that after the fall of the seven of spades on the first round he was bound to play West for a blank honor and East for a doubleton King. He would have led the Queen of trumps through in any event.

As it was, the Queen was blanked by the heart forces. When dummy led the trump Queen, East sought to embarrass declarer by withholding the King. Indeed, it would have been fatal for declarer to put himself back with a diamond ruff to extract the last trump. His own trumps would be exhausted in the process, and East would cash a heart when he got in with the club Ace. But declarer simply knocked out the club Ace first.

What TODAY Means

IF MAY 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. until noon, from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 4 to 6 p. m. and from 10 p. m. until midnight.

If May 21 is your birthday, you were born under the Zodiacal sign, Gemini. The impulse to do good dominates you as a rule. You are inclined to be hasty in making decisions. Practice deliberation, if you would avoid mistakes. You are able to have diversified interests, which your versatility will enable you to handle well. In the forming of business connections of a permanent nature, the greatest care should be exercised, as you may be inclined to have a changeable mind, where likes and dislikes may be of radical importance. Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in courtships, born on this date, may find Wednesday, ruled by Mercury, a very lucky day.

If a woman and May 21 is your birthday, you should possess a great deal of originality. Being skillful with your hands, and blessed with an ability to express yourself well, you should have no difficulty in making an enviable place for yourself in your community. You probably will design something, or originate an idea, which will become very popular, and if commercialized may be profitable also.

The child born on May 21, as soon as it arrives at school age, should be taught the importance of self-assertion. It should be encouraged to be outspoken, and not afraid to express its ideas.

If a man and May 21 is your natal day, you are kind hearted, energetic, and of the executive type. You have an inventive latent ability, which if developed might be successfully commercialized.

Woman Panned $700 in Gold.

Garden Valley, Calif. (U.P.).—That's still gold in the California hills. Mrs. George Morgan went to work with her husband for an hour one day at the bottom of a 120-foot shaft and panned $700 in gold. Then she returned to her housework.

Harding Snared Sailfish.

Marion, Ohio (U.P.).—Recently circulated stories to the effect that Herbert Hoover was the only President ever to catch a sailfish has caused members of the Marion County Club to storm and issue vigorous denials, for hanging in a place of honor in their clubhouse is a six-foot fish of that variety which the late Warren G. Harding caught in Texas waters a few days before he took the presidential oath.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Dale loves her young husband, Michael, but the gossip she has heard about him is apparently verified when she sees him with another girl, so she decides it must be true. At the urging of her mother, Mrs. Mallory, Ellen files a divorce suit and goes home to pack her belongings. There Mike finds her, and Ellen faints. They discover that a baby is on the way so decide to forget about the divorce and continue as before. But they do not regain their happiness, for neither has the courage to confess that their love is still the most important thing in the world. Michael Dale, jr., arrives.

MICHAEL DALE, JR., was the sweetest, the smartest and the handsomest little codger ever—the entire family agreed on that even before they brought him from the hospital.

Even mamma was quite reconciled. Not only that but, for the first time in his married life, she treated her son-in-law, Michael, jr.'s father, with a cordiality that was astounding.

"He looks like you, Mike," she even ventured. And that was unimaginable praise for mamma.

Wee Michael did look like his father—as much as a new born human could ever look like an adult human who has trod earth's old pathway for at least a quarter of a century.

Ellen used to hold the wee thing close in the cricle of her arms and ponder the miracle of it all—Michael's curling hair, blond and vibrant. Michael's blue gray eyes—even the tiny Michael had the intentness of gaze of the older Michael. It was almost uncanny in a babe so young.

Loved His Father.

"I'm glad, I'm so glad that you're like your daddy," Ellen used to whisper, hugging her baby close. "You must grow up to be a good man like your daddy. I love him—I love him so much, little Mike. Do you think that he loves me?"

What at pity Ellen did not say those things to the older Mike who fairly hungered to hear them. But Michael and Ellen were still playing at cross purposes.

Every evening, right after the dinner hour, along with all the other new fathers, Michael visited his wife and baby in the hospital. He always shaved, put on his very best suit and came bearing a gift—fruit or flowers, or a new magazine, some little thing that would make the days of convalescence in the hospital less long.

He felt exactly as though he courted Ellen for the second time—but very much less certain of her tolerance than then. There was one subject upon which they always agreed. That was the absolute perfection of young Michael. They would talk of him by the hour.

Understood Now.

"I used to be a little bit bored by the way mothers talked of their children," Ellen confessed, "but now I understand them absolutely."

Michael agreed. "I suppose I'll be buttonholing every man I meet now and showing him young Mike's picture or telling him the newest cute remark the youngster pulled."

"You always call him Baby. Are you sure, Ellen, that you want to name him Michael?"

"Of course I want to name him Michael."

"Why?"

That was Ellen's opportunity. She should have said, "Because I love his father very much, because he is the dearest and the best—" there were many things to say. But the shadow of their difference lay too plainly between them.

In her heart Ellen actually believed that Mike would have been glad to go on with the divorce, that he played the role of husband merely because of the wee bundle of new life she held in her arms.

Liked the Name.

So she said very prosaically. "Because Michael is a good, honorable name and because I believe that it is a nice thing to name him after his father. You want him to be named Michael, don't you?"

"Of course," Mike said. There had been an instant when Michael's heart had gone soaring. Was Ellen about to say some gentle, tender thing? "No," he told himself bitterly, Ellen did not love him. Perhaps she had never loved him.

In the middle of the second week of young Michael's life Dr. John told Ellen that she could get up and around a bit.

"I told Michael that he might take you and the youngster home from the hospital in a day or so. He's counting the hours and he's had his mother over at the house superintending some of the things you wanted done. She's scared to death for fear they won't get things exactly as you want them."

Tribute to Wife.

"They will," Ellen said, pleased. "I talked with Michael about what I wanted done and anyway, Mother Dale has more artistic sense than I have any day."

Dr. John lit up at her praise of his wife. "She's a grand old gal—Mary is. And she's happier than a lark about this grandbaby. Ellen, you've got to be generous with the little tike. You know every one of us is just watering at the mouth to get at the precious youngster."

"I suppose when we get home, away from a pesky old hospital where they won't even let you hold your own baby, that we'll just form a line and take turns getting to hold him."

Ellen laughed. "Dear old Daddy Doctor," she said. "So you think your grandbaby's quite a child?"

Mother Agreed.

Doctor John looked at his daughter-in-law very seriously. "I don't mind telling you, Ellen, that I'm very, very happy. You know I was mightily afraid there, for a few weeks that you and Michael weren't making a go of it. But with little Michael — well, Ellen, parents would be pretty selfish individuals if they didn't settle down and make a home, and a real home for a child like that."

Queerly enough Mama said almost the same thing. She had come to the hospital in the late afternoon so that she would be there when the nurse brought young Michael out of the nursery into his mother's room.

"And I want to bring Mr. Hardesty. He's eager to see the baby, too," she added.

"I wrote him a little note," Ellen said, "thanking him for that gorgeous box of flowers he sent—almost as though he belonged to the family."

Romance Certain.

Mama blushed. She was pleased at the way Ellen worded that.

"By the way, Mama, tell me, what are the new developments in that affair?"

"How you talk, Ellen. Why, Mr. Hardesty and I are just good friends—very good friends, that's all."

"Then what's the sense of blushing so hard about it, Mama?" Ellen laugher joyously. The world seemed suddenly a merry, amusing place.

Mama seemed lost in deep thought. At last she spoke. "I tell you, Ellen, sometimes I just don't know what to do. Sometimes I think I'll just go wild."

"Why, Mama! Whatever is the matter?"

"I might as well tell you that it's Mr. Hardesty. I think he wants to marry me. He hasn't exactly said so, but——" Mama hung her head, shy as any girl.

Dream Come True.

Ellen found amused voice. "Well, that isn't so hard to take, is it, Mama? I thought you liked him awfully well. And he seems to be tremendously fond of Bob."

"He is and if we marry, Mr. Hardesty might send Bob to college. Our financial worries would be over. Oh, Ellen, it would be a dream come true."

It did sound like a dream, a wild and woolly dream, Ellen agreed to herself. Mama getting married Married to a rich man. Why, it was a dream—but a nice dream. "Then why in the world, Mama—"

Mama began to cry, wiped the big tears from her eyes—not forgetting to do it gently so as not to mar the makeup. "It's your Aunt Ellen, she's making an awful fuss because she suspects our friendship might lead to marriage."

Couldn't Object.

"Why she couldn't be. She couldn't object, Mama. Why, she was the very one to tell me to go ahead and get married—to say that I had the right to live my own life. Oh, no, Mama, she just couldn't be objecting to your marrying a nice man like Mr. Hardesty."

"Oh, but she is, Ellen. You'd be surprised. She just watches me like a hawk. If I'm out late—" Mama stopped suddenly, then resumed apologetically, "Well, occasionally you know we go to a dinner or a—a dance——"

"You don't, Mama?"—in great glee.

"Oh, yes, I do, Ellen. I suppose that what they say is true—there's nothing like an old fool but—but we—well, Ellen, we like each other very much—in fact, we love each other——"

"Then we really are apt to have a wedding? Just wait until I get home and around and we'll make it a big event. Let's see, how will we word it, Mrs. Michael Dale announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her mother—oh, Mama, that's rich."

Set in Her Ways.

"Aunt Ellen would never listen to it," Rose Mallory said with decision. "She says that I ought to be ashamed o myself—at my age—trying to act like a young girl."

"I'll talk with her, Mama. Why I'll just jolly her out of those arguments."

"You can't, Ellen," seriously, "you can't, I know, I tried. She's so set in her ways. I never could understand it, Ellen. Now I always believed in letting people lead their own lives. But Aunt Ellen is 70. She's set in her ways."

"I suppose," Ellen whispered to her baby after Mama had gone, "I suppose that when you're 20, I'll be telling you whether you can fall in love, Darling. I guess the other generation will always give advice, whether it's younger or older."

"No more tired, let-down feeling for me"

"I reasoned that my red blood corpuscle strength was low and I simply took a course of S.S.S. Tonic and built it back."

IT is all so simple and reasonable. If your physical let-down is caused by lowered red blood corpuscles—which is all too frequent—then S.S.S. Tonic is waiting to help you... and will, unless you have a serious organic trouble that demands a physician or surgeon.

Remember, S.S.S. is not just a so-called "tonic." It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying red corpuscles in the blood.

This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilized... and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

You may have the will-power to be "up and doing" but unless your blood is in top-notch form you are not fully yourself and you may remark, "I wonder why I tire so easily."

Let S.S.S. help build back your blood tone... if your case is not exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... steady nerves... a good complexion... and renewed strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes. The $2 economy size is twice as large as the $1.25 regular size and is sufficient for two weeks treatment. Begin on the uproad today. © S.S.S. Co.
